Hearnes Expresses Concern About Taxpayer Burdens

SALEM, Mo. AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Wednesday night "the taxpayer must not be burdened beyond the point where his economic health is really impaired."

He reviewed, before the Salem Chamber of Commerce, the duties of the legislature and the chief executive.

"The Missouri General Assembly and I, as governor of this state have a common responsibility," he said. "We must be concerned by all social needs. Roads must be built. The unemployed must be sustained while they are being retrained. . .

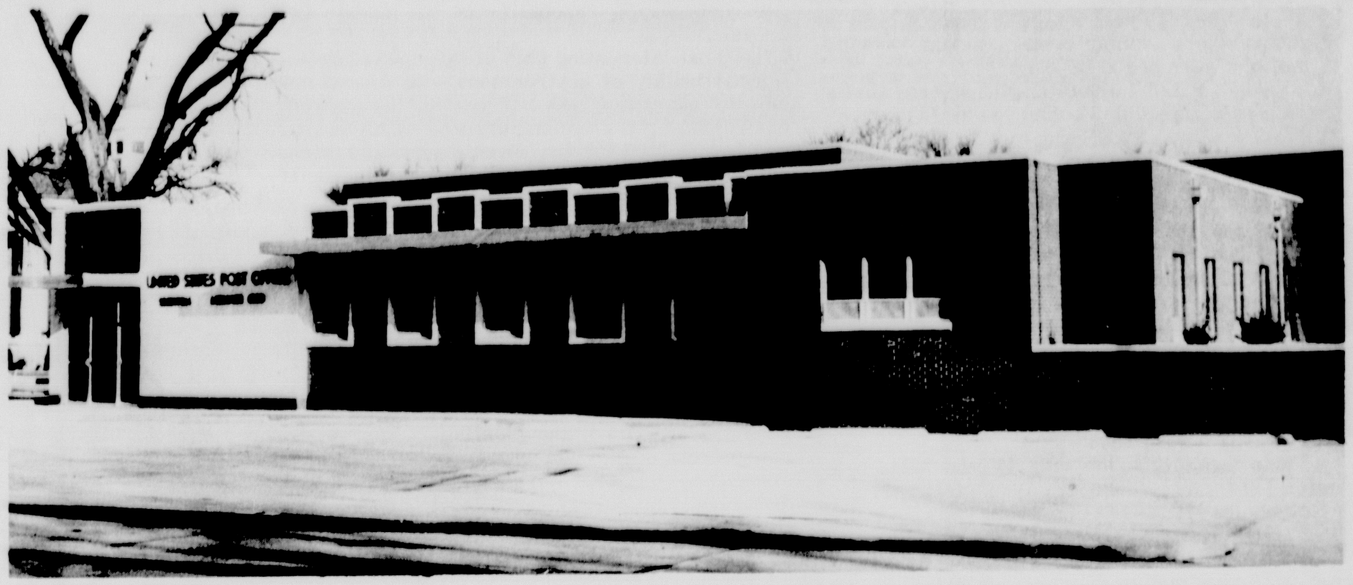
"In short, your legislators and your governor constantly face what I consider our most difficult task - that of reconciling unlimited demands with limited resources."

Six Emergencies

Six persons were treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital yesterday.

Jesse Scots, Sikeston, caught hand in roller; Colin Hawkins, Sikeston, spiked while playing baseball; Muriel Wingfield, Bell City, slammed car door on finger; Michael James, New Madrid, stepped on nail; Terry Shands, East Prairie, cut arm on tin; and Thomas Powers, East Prairie, fell off wagon.

Sikeston's New Post Office Ready



Sikeston's new $185,000 post office has been completed, and the move into the new building will take place over the weekend, according to Postmaster Pleas Malcolm.

The McDaniel Bros. Construction Company, Jonesboro, Ark., are the owners and builders of this modern air - conditioned building, and have leased it to the postal department.

The front of the building faces North street, and the west side faces the parking lot on North Kingshighway. The front of the building is set back to provide parking for ten vehicles, with additional street parking available.

The moving will begin Saturday with all city and rural services to be moved into the building, but all boxholders will continue to receive their mail in the old building until Monday morning.

The finance and management department will also be moved Saturday, as will all equipment.

There will be no close counters in the clerks department, as the lobby to the stamp counter, money order and parcel post counters, will be enclosed by glass doors, and remain open until service is closed at 4:30 p.m. The remaining part of the long lobby, for the boxholders and letter and package depository, will be open to the public at all hours.

All boxholders in the old building are asked to return all keys before the changeover takes place. They must account for all keys issued to them. The new box numbers are different from the old, and therefore few if any customers will receive the same number. All boxholders should check on this matter for any business reference used in the future.

Delivery service at the window will be on daylight saving time, while all incoming mail remains on standard time. The new time will cause some handicap in getting all class mail up and delivered by the time the windows open at 8:30 a.m.

Education And Health Bills Discussed By Committee

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Dr. George A. Ulett, director of Missouri's Mental Diseases Division, told the Senate Appropriations Committee today he is not surprised by public criticism, but resents it when it is directed at superintendents of state hospitals.

Tragic overcrowding, low salaries and poor working conditions at the state institutions are due to inadequate funds and facilities, not mismanagement, he said.

Ulett said asking superintendents to administer an effective mental health program under existing conditions is like hiring a carpenter to build without lumber, nails or tools.

But Missouri is now on the threshold of an effective treatment program.

"Just a few years ago," he said, "there was not much we could do for the mentally ill--just institutionalize and feed them.

"Today, medical science has given us new treatment methods."

He urged the committee to double the $237,500 recommended by the governor and approved by the House for research and training at the new Missouri Institute of Psychiatry in St. Louis.

Eventually, Missouri should spend $2 million a year on this part of the program since it would save money in terms of more rapid cure of the mentally ill, he said.

An immediate problem facing the division is the high turnover in employes, particularly among attendants, Dr. Ulett said. In some areas, the turnover is as high as 30 per cent.

He recommended salary increases to stabilize the work force.

Ulett also asked the committee to consider a $260,000 increase over the governor's recommendation of $685,000 for placing custodial patients in licensed nursing homes.

He said there are now more than 1,000 patients being cared for under this program at one third the cost of maintaining them in state institutions.

The total asked by the division, including funds for the seven hospitals, is about $46 million to operate the program the next fiscal year.

Wednesday night the committee completed hearings on educational needs.

Presidents of the five state colleges and Lincoln University met with the committee Wednesday to explain budget requests for the coming year.

A common plea was for more teachers, higher salaries and additional facilities to meet rapidly increasing enrollments.

Dr. Ben Morton, executive secretary of the state commission on higher education, stressed the need to bring the student-teacher ratio to one instructor for 20 students. The national average is 1-19.

Teacher salary levels also are too low to enable Missouri schools to compete with others in the Midwest, he said.

The House-approved funds for operating the six institutions fairly well in line with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' tight budget, but went even further in trimming proposed building projects.

Examining the budget requests of the State Division of Health Wednesday night, the committee was asked to put back $400,000 pared by the House.

The acting director, Dr. H. Hardwicke, said the money is needed to hire additional health inspectors, public nurses and supervisors.

He said there are 5,000 restaurants--mostly in rural Missouri--that are not being inspected for health standards because of inadequate personnel.

The problem is not so difficult in cities which have their own public health departments. Some state help is needed in smaller cities, but rarely is it necessary to inspect in St. Louis or Kansas City, he said.

Hiring additional public health nurses would pay the state dividends, Dr. Hardwicke said. It would permit home care and cut down on the costs of hospital and nursing home support.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Sixty - seven percent of the American public in 1965 believes that no citizen should be forced to belong to a union in order to hold his job. This is a record - high percentage of support for the Right to Work principle since nation - wide samplings were begun in 1944.

The so - called "union shop" requires that a person be compelled to belong to a union in order to hold his job. The Right to Work laws, now existing in 20 states, prohibit this compulsion.

The Opinion Research Corporation, Princeton, New Jersey, conducted a study of public opinion for the National Right to Work Committee. The following question was asked:

Which of these three arrangements do you favor for workers in industry?

A man can hold a job whether or not he belongs to a union 1956 - 48%; 1962 - 62%; 1964 - 67%.

A man can get a job if he doesn't already belong, but has to join after he is hired 1956 - 32%; 1962 - 31%; 1964 - 30%.

A man can get a job only if he belongs to a union 1956 - 6%; 1962 - 4%; 1964 - 2%.

No choice 1956 - 14%; 1962 - 3%; 1964 - 1%.

Data from the ORC study are based on a total of 1,025 personal interviews conducted across the country with respondents selected by scientific probability procedures. ORC declares that "the survey results are almost certainly within plus or minus 4% of the figures which would have been obtained if every adult in the survey area (U. S. A.) had been interviewed.

In its recap, ORC states: "Today, voluntary union membership enjoys majority support among all major population groups, except the unionized worker."

The research organization says its data show 28% of union manual workers in 1964 favor voluntary unionism as opposed to the compulsion of "union shop." Among manual workers (including non - union as well as union), 56% object to compulsory unionism and favor the Right to Work principle, according to results obtained in the survey.

S. D. Cadwallader, President of the National Right to Work Committee, and himself a railroad conductor of Cincinnati, said:

"These most recent facts developed from nation - wide studies show that the propaganda of the 'union shop' forces is not being swallowed by the American public. Increasing numbers of American citizens are becoming aware of the compulsion exercised by so - called 'union shop' contract, and the massive money power which this compulsion gives into the hands of the union hierarchy.

"The tens of millions of dollars being spent politically by the Meanys, the Reuthers, the Bridges and the other politically - minded union officials come largely from dues and fees raised with the instrument of compulsion -- the so-called 'union shop.' It is an infringement on the personal liberty of American citizens; and inherent in the use of this club of compulsion is the danger of Totalitarianism.

"Some of the union hierarchy are determined that every American citizen who works -- 78,000,000 today -- shall be forced to pay dues and belong to unions.

"The Right to Work movement is expanding. Additional states soon will be added to the growing list which safeguard a citizen's right to belong or not belong to a union."

Today, voluntary union membership enjoys majority support among all major population groups, except the unionized worker.

A tremendous affluence in American society will generate better taste and a consequent boom in home, factory, community and highway environments of beauty in every state in the Union. "There is a vast upsurge in the country for ugliness to be eliminated and beauty of the landscape substituted," says the American Association of Nurserymen. "Already this trend is in evidence -- in fact it gradually has been increasing in tempo for the past decade as indicated by demands for trees and shrubs to beautify the country. The year 1965 should break all records."

General buying income is expected to advance 50 per cent in the next ten years to $675 billions. Ten percent more families will be in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket. Better taste in living will prevail. No longer will most families be content with living in rundown neighborhoods where there is little or no emphasis on the landscape beauty and open space which everyone wants, especially as his income increases.

The most interesting part of this upward sweep is that beauty of environment will spread not only to more families but also to the working environment, the community and to highways, as visualized in the President's and Mrs. Johnson's programs, which add tremendous push to all drives for beauty.

How can the average citizen participate in this great surge for beauty and good taste in his surroundings?

First, he can survey his own property, either by himself, or by engaging a good nurseryman to advise him, after which he can lay plans for planting the property to make it beautiful. It doesn't have to be done all at once. If the landscaping is rundown or overgrown, he can renovate it. Or, if the planting is sparse, he can merely add to the beauty he already has.

Secondly, the operators of businesses and factories can survey their locations and then beautify them, in order to reap the benefits that come from trees and shrubs. Greater sales come to businesses in beautifully planted locations, as many suburban department stores and super markets especially have found out.

Factories find that beautiful landscaping and open space pays off in better workers, better public and community relations.

Third, communities need to take a good look at themselves. It is not only the large communities that sometimes are ugly. Many small communities need to plant and beautify so that visitors might exclaim, "I'd like to live here." Beauty pays. In beautified communities and neighborhoods real estate values are higher, business better. The small town of St. James, Mo., planted street trees and according to the local newspaper the people were given a "new spirit," new energies to make the community an even better place in which to live.

Fourth, highways and streets planted with lovely trees and shrubs will help to upgrade the community. Entrances to communities can be beautified. State and Federal highway departments are placing vast new emphasis on landscape beauty.

Every citizen, every business man and industrialist, every community and the state each can, by conducting their own individual surveys in relation to beauty, do a great deal to make America a better and more beautiful place to live, work and play. Beautification is everybody's job if "America the beautiful" really is to live up to its name, it is stated.

"The nation can only be beautiful if the public as well as business feels a responsibility toward and joins in the great task set forth," the association concludes.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Despite the authentic-sounding story carried by two New York Herald Tribune columnists on how President Johnson happened to appoint Jerry Wadsworth to the Federal Communications Commission, here is the real story of what happened:

LBJ was conferring with ex-Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, whom he once defeated for Vice President. During the course of the conversation over Viet Nam, the President complained that he couldn't get good Republicans to take jobs with his Administration. He said he had been looking for a well qualified Republican to become Federal Communications Commissioner, wanted someone who could stand up against the networks, would campaign for less crime on the airwaves, more wholesome children's programs and more education.

Lodge, a Republican who used to be U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, immediately told the President that he knew an excellent man to fill the FCC post. He named his former associate, Jerry Wadsworth, who succeeded him as U. S. Ambassador to the U.N.

President Johnson picked up the telephone immediately, called Wadsworth, offered him the job. Wadsworth accepted.

Note — The networks aren't happy about Wadsworth's appointment. They figure he will give them a bad time. This is because he is probably even better than Johnson realizes. He has had the courage of his convictions in many tight spots, worked during the closing days of the Eisenhower Administration for better understanding with the Russians, always claimed that the future peace of the world depended upon better understanding between these two powerful nations.

—TWO GREAT MEN—

Two men died last weekend, diverse in their backgrounds but similar in their goals. They illustrate what makes America.

One, Gardner Jackson, the son of a railroad magnate, gave away a fortune to help other people. The other, Sen. Olin Johnston, began life as a South Carolina textile worker and never forgot his humble beginnings.

I first met Sen. Johnston at breakfast in the Governor's Mansion in Columbia, S. C., in 1937. It was the biggest breakfast I ever ate -- until I had breakfast with Khrushchev some years later. It included hominy grits, bacon, ham and eggs, fried apples, corn bread, gravy, fruit, coffee, and milk. Gov. Jonnston, in his slow, South Carolina drawl, told me that he was permitting Negroes to register in the Democratic party at 10 cents a head — a revolutionary move in South Carolina at that time.

Later, when Olin came to the Senate, he reversed his liberal start in permitting Negro participation in South Carolina politics but he never reversed his determination to help the working people from which he sprang. While other Southern Senators were lining up with reactionary Republicans against minimum wages, public power, antipoverty legislation, Olin never wavered. Many times the conservatives in his state tried to change or defeat him. They failed.

—SON OF THE RICH—

I first met Gardner Jackson in 1928, on the observation platform of a Santa Fe railroad train leaving Los Angeles for the East. I had come west just after Herbert Hoover was elected, to try to go on his goodwill trip to Latin America. I then represented La Nacion of Buenos Aires and El Mundo of Havana. Hoover had decreed that no Latin American correspondent could go on the battleship with him and I suspected the ruling was aimed chiefly at me since I was not in his good graces.

In a last ditch effort to get aboard, I hired a motor boat and went out to the gangplank of the U.S.S. Maryland and started to climb aboard. I was thrown off. I went back to the Western Union office and filed a thousand words to Buenos Aires telling how La Nacion's correspondent was kicked off the Hoover "goodwill" battleship.

This may have influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere in Buenos Aires when Mr. Hoover arrived later. It definitely influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere on the Santa Fe observation platform as I took the train back to Washington. There however, I met Gardner Jackson, one of the most engaging battlers for humanity I have ever known.

Gardner got off the train in Arizona to help the cause of the Navajo Indians, later moved to Washington to help all sorts of causes, ranging from tenant farmers, the bonus marchers, the Spanish Loyalists in their battle against Dictator Franco. In fact, there wasn't a tough cause he didn't champion, beginning with Sacco and Vanzetti, two socialist Italians accused of the famous payroll robbery in Dedham, Mass.

Gardner lost many of the causes. Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the Spanish Loyalists lost their war. He was thrown out of the Agriculture Department for being too vociferous in going to bat for the sharecroppers.

But Gardner never lost his enthusiasm, never lost his determination to help his fellowmen. In the course of helping them, he gave away practically all of the family fortune which his father, the founder of the Denver-Rio Grande Railroad, had left.

Gardner Jackson is gone. And as he died, some of the causes which he championed, and were considered lost, proved not lost after all.

Though Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the rules of criminal procedure which convicted them have been revamped so that others in their predicament would not be executed today. The Spanish Loyalists lost, but the freedoms which they championed have gradually come back to modern Spain. Long ago the veterans who marched on Washington got their bonus. And just as Gardner Jackson died, the migrant farm workers for whom he fought such a seemingly hopeless battle won a great victory with the exclusion of foreign wetbacks.

Those were two men who died last week, one poor, the other originally wealthy, who in their different ways pushed forward the progress of America.

Hal Boyle

Hal Boyle, 54, Associated Press human interest columnist for 21 years, is en route to his third assignment to a major armed conflict - Viet Nam.

Boyle, whose daily column appears in approximately 500 afternoon newspapers, was war correspondent for The Associated Press in Africa and Europe in World War II where his frontline stories of GIs in action won him a Pulitzer Prize in 1945.

In 1950 he volunteered for Associated Press duty in Korea, and reported on front-line activities during the heaviest fighting on that peninsula. There he won the Veterans of Foreign War's gold medal award for "outstanding contribution to national security." He also received the Overseas Press Club top award for best reporting in radio, television and newspapers.

Boyle's column was born under fire in Salerno, Italy, in 1943 and has been a continuous Associated Press feature since. Following the surrender of Japan he traveled around the world, writing stories from 65 countries.

Boyle's five-day-a - week column will be written from South Viet Nam during his assignment abroad.

In 1951, in presenting the VFW gold medal, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, then chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said of Boyle:

"I am pleased that this award goes to a friend I have known so long. He is the soldier's friend. I don't know anyone who knows fighting at the front so well, or anyone who has written so well about it."

Boyle, who has been dubbed "The Poor Man's Philosopher" and the "Pavement Plato," is a native of Kansas City, Mo., where he started his AP career in 1928 as a copy boy at 17. He was night city editor of the New York AP bureau in 1942 when he first went overseas.

NEW YORK (AP) — He was one of those quiet heroes for whom no bugles ever blow because we accept their daily bravery as a commonplace.

The cab drivers who picked him up every morning referred to him as "the bentover man." They called him that because he was bent over. Way over. Arthritis had frozen his spine in a permanent and painful arc.

But John L. McKee wasn't a bentover man at all when I first met him at the Missouri School of Journalism more than three decades ago. He was as straight and tall as a double yardstick. He was a fine all-around athlete, a medal-winning swimmer, and had a voice so promising that for a time he considered making singing his career.

Then something he could do nothing about went wrong with his strong young body. Nor could any of the medical specialists he consulted really help him much.

Arthritis seemed to grip his spine like a giant hand and slowly and progressively bent him over.

"Sometimes I think it is trying to turn me into a human pretzel," he once observed drily.

His swimming days were over. So were his hopes of becoming a professional singer. But John — or "Blackjack" as his pals came to know him — could bend over a typewriter.

And he bent over it with increasing skill. He wrote radio news for a time, then became a specialist in world business news, and won recognition as one of the best in the field.

People with an affliction have only two courses open to them. They either yield to self-pity and give up. Or they refuse to yield and make the best of a raw deal from fate.

"Blackjack" was a fighting Scot gifted with inexhaustible courage. If he ever felt sorry for himself, it was his own secret.

He had a wry and wonderful sense of humor and never lost it. His hobby was waging small wars with large corporations. He chuckled all day when he caught some huge public utility or banking firm in an error, and could point it out to their top brass in a pungent letter of mock dismay.

In 1950 "Blackjack" fell and broke some neck vertebrae.

"He can never work again," his doctors agreed.

But he stayed on the job for nearly 15 more years, although his head was not almost as moveless as his spine. His posture was so bad he could not look up or to the right or left. He recognized his friends by their shoes.

Once he told me: "I can always tell you — you're too cheap to get a shine."

In bad weather or good, he made it to his desk. The rough cabbies in his neighborhood had a protective attitude toward him. They'd pass by a fuming fat lady or an important-looking executive anytime to pick up "that bent over fellow with the cane."

Early this year "Blackjack" suffered a stroke. After a brain operation, his stubborn heart beat on for three months in its paralyzed frame and then stopped. Knowing the end was near, he had asked before entering the hospital that his body go to science. That was like him, too.

A cabdriver asked me the other day, "Say, whatever happened to your friend, the bentover man?" When I told him, he was silent for a moment and then said:

"Well, he sure was a grand guy. I never knew anybody that showed more real guts."

When people talk like that about you after you're gone, you don't need a memorial. You've made a success out of life.

"A MORE PERFECT UNION"

Back in our school days one of the first things we learned in history class was that this nation is a union of sovereign states. Not that we knew what "sovereign" meant; we probably didn't even wonder. But it sounded good -- sort of reassuring.

A union of sovereign states still sounds good. But in these latter days the states are losing much of their onetime proud dominion.

Just one example; the growing trend to by-pass the state governments entirely as the federal government steps up its programs dealing directly with municipalities and community organizations.

John Burkhart, an Indianapolis businessman, put the issue very clearly when he testified before a Senate subcommittee studying federal grants-in-aid.

"More and more federal grants are being made directly to local governments and community organizations," according to Mr. Burkhart, who urged that such grants be paid through state channels if the state so elects.

We agree with his logic. States should have a "direct, decisive and required role" in all federal programs which disburse taxpayers' funds within the state.

Legislation now before the Senate subcommittee would encourage a reversal of traditional federal-state relationships and would put local government in the primary role in dealing with the federal government.

With hundreds of federal aid programs pouring out billions annually, the taxpayers who provide these funds should demand that they be allocated in an orderly fashion. Channeling them through state governments should result in a more systematic and efficient system and at the same time help return some measure of sovereignty to the sovereign states. Until that happy day arrives when grants-in-aid can be eliminated, let's make them as efficient as possible.

NOT WORTH THE TROUBLE

It was a foggy morning, and the fishing smacks off Gloucester nosed their way out of the harbor. Suddenly a sailor in one craft hailed another:

"Hello, John, I have news for ye."

"What is it?"

"Wife had a baby, a boy."

"What'd he weigh?" the other voice called.

"Four pounds," came the reply, through the fog.

"Hell, you hardly got your bait back!"

GETTING TOGETHER

Freedom will be kept only so long as it is valued. And it will be valued only so long as it is understood.

Many Americans today think they still value freedom, but in practice they do not since they have ceased to understand it. They have a vague "feeling" that freedom is good, but they do not know why. So they are helpless against the clever propaganda and insidious proposals of freedom's enemies.

In renewing and enlarging an understanding of liberty, sound pro-freedom organizations and publications must play a vital part. We cannot all be students and specialists. We cannot all be writers and organizers. Those who are able to specialize in thinking and writing about Liberty, and who can form organizations in freedon's favor, have a service of the highest value to offer.

Every American who still has a "feeling" that freedom is good needs to learn more about pro-freedom groups and publications, or segments of them. If at all possible, he should read many of the publications regularly and join the best of the organizations.

Once our education is well underway, we should help to begin the education of others, so as to "multiply ourselves," and the strength which could save liberty, and pass on to others some of the knowledge of public affairs often so pathetically lacking.

Even the millions who do not know the names of their Congressmen, or of foreign countries which have become battlegrounds of the struggle against communism, can and must be reached.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

New Revolutionary 'Labor Party' Leader Plans To Set Up "Self Defense Units"

NEW YORK — Money — lots of it — appeared to be the least of the problems of the "Revolutionary Marxist - Leninist" movement launched here Sunday at the Progressive Labor Party (PLP).

From somewhere came ample funds to keep 110 delegates at the founding convention here for a week at the rate of almost $2,000 a day in expenses.

From somewhere came funds for the printing and distributing of tens of thousands of leaflets, booklets and a 48-page convention discussion document in New York and Washington, D.C., over the April 17 weekend.

And whatever the mysterious sources are, they're also providing thousands of dollars monthly for maintenance of a network of headquarters. The PLP people claim headquarters in Berkeley, San Francisco, Chicago, Buffalo, Louisville, Ky., and Williamsport, Pa. These, in addition to three major offices here in New York.

Apparently there is no doubt of the gold flow. PLP leaders are planning to publish not only a Marxist-Leninist quarterly, a national newspaper, and a series of anti-imperialist booklets, but also a slick magazine fashioned after the pro-Chinese Communist "Revolution" now issued in Paris for the European continent.

Thus there is no reason to doubt that the avowedly Communist Progressive Labor Party — pro-Maoist and pro-Castro — will find the money for its action program.

And those of us seeking clues to the direct action planned by this tough coalition of young people find the specifics in the militant, disdainful program advocated by the PLP's most powerful leader.

He's the 32-year-old William Epton, arrested last August on Charges of advocating criminal anarchy. His arrest came after the Harlem riots. His aggressive eight-point action program should be a signal to white and Negro communities alike.

The tenor of his words, the implications of his call to action can be measured by his feeling that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King is too moderate to be followed by the Negro people.

Epton, a vice president of the new party calls for the launching of "self defense units" to protect the organizations and activities he outlines from "attacks by the ruling class and their representative arm — the police and other para-military units."

Epton demands the revival of something not encountered inside labor for decades. He urges the creation of trade union caucuses or organizations within the trade union movement that would "represent the interests of the black workers and guarantee them (the interests)."

He calls for tenant, house, and block committees to struggle in low income areas.

In the image of the depression day militancy, he urges organization of unemployment councils to demand jobs and bring the unemployed together.

He wants "political councils" set up to "take effective control of their communities."

He demands immediate establishing of "farm - worker organizations of sharecroppers and tenant farmers" so they could "demand agrarian reform and land to the landless."

Then Epton wants all these units to "come together into a nationwide coalition" in an "all-black liberation front led by the black working class."

Wherever Epton spoke of his action program he was cheered by the PLP people. There can be no doubt of the organization's efforts to concentrate on farm and factory labor.

Two of Epton's fellow vice presidents were not identified but were described as former steelworkers from Buffalo. There are units on the waterfront and on the rails. These are made up of young people. The Party is made up of young people.

In days of old they would have made up the youth movement of the American Communist Party. But now the Moscow-line Communists are older and disinclined to go in for the direct action which they describe as "infantile leftism."

By actual count, there are some 1,500 known activists in the founding party. But, in the words of one of the government's highest security officials, they are "dedicated to stirring wildcat action in the factories and on the streets. They are a very successful and militant band of young revolutionists and have had ample money since the first day they went into business as the Progressive Labor Movement back in 1962.

"They don't just pass resolutions, They're zealously working for a revolution.

"They won't make it, of course, but the trouble they make will give this country real difficulty."

William Hacker

William Hacker To Conduct Symphony

William Penny Hacker who will conduct the Virginia Symphony on April 26, has had a career which could be described as fabulous quite truthfully. Mr. Hacker was just sixteen years old and a student under the magnificent Jose Iturbi when Mr. Iturbi offered him his first opportunity to conduct a symphony orchestra. Appearing before the Orquestra Iturbi de Mexico, his success was immediate and assured. A leading Mexican music critic, Kahan, announced in his column, "He is a Master Director, born and not made, musical to the marrow of his bones." Something of that must have been evident to the audience of 10,000 people who heard him make his conducting debut at the Central Park Naumburg Symphony Concerts last summer.

Between these two performances Mr. Hacker has filled many concert engagements both as pianist and conductor. He is a "cum laude" graduate of the Eastman School of music, and went from there to the University of Arkansas to join the music faculty. While there he organized the Arkansas State Symphony, the excellence of which won him the title of "Arkansas Traveller" from the Governor, and a special account which was read into the Congressional Record by Senator William J. Fulbright. After Presenting a highly successful series of concerts as Piano soloist the demand for concert appearance came in such a flood that Mr. Hacker found it necessary to give up his University post and since then has played approximately one hundred piano recitals a season in addition to making many appearances as guest conductor with various orchestras.

Bulldog Cindermen Win At Charleston

In the Scott - Mississippi Track and field Tournament yesterday, the Sikeston Bulldogs came out on top of the rugged field of teams. Sikeston finished in first place, only 4 points ahead of Charleston's powerful Bluejays.

Russell Felker helped lead the Bulldogs to victory with his first in the 440 yard dash. Felker's time of 52.2 set a new school record. The old record for the 440 was set by Walter Bizzell in 1952.

Dale Stauffer also set a new record for the Bulldogs in the 2 mile. Stauffer paced himself well and came home with a 10:51 time. The Bulldog's mile relay team compsed of Steve McMackius, Kenny Cantrell, John Neal and Russell Felker also broke the Sikeston School record for that event.

Johnson won a first for the Bulldogs in the 220, with a 22:4.

Critchlow had another first for Sikeston in the Broad jump with a leap of 19'9". Critchlow also won a first in the 100 yard dash with a time of 10.4. Burns and Stallings worked on the hill for the Bulldogs. Burns pitched 3 innings, allowing 2 runs and Stallings worked the other 4 innings. PEDI-CURE

Whose foot is small is blessed beyond compare,
For round-toed shoes today are something rare;
We fashion - minded ladies have to wear
The kind that pinch our toes.

From far abroad, our fashions came to be,
And it's not very hard for us to see,
Why all the gals go barefoot in Paree;
They mean to curb their woes.

But if our thoroughfare down Main were trod,
With tootsies bare, and footsies all unshod,
We would be dubbed some kind of crazy clod. . . .
To leave off half our clothes.

So we will all stay chic, and in the know,
We'll follow suit, as shoe styles come and go,
And maybe wind up having just one toe. . .
In years to come . . . who knows? — J. Pat Babin

St. Louis Wins Over Milwaukee

Manager Red Schoendienst called on his bench Wednesday night and Tito Francona and Phil Gagliano answered with ringing bats that produced a 6-3 St. Louis victory over Milwaukee in St. Louis.

The red haired freckled Schoendienst a "little concerned" about the Cards' snaillike start that had produced only one victory in six games, benched Mike Shannon and Julian Javier.

Kansas City was shut out 1-0 by the Tigers in Detroit.

Everything fell into place for the Cardinals as Bill White hit his first home run in the first inning with none on and Lou Brock hammered his second with one on to kick off a four-run fifth inning.

Bob Purkey won his first game with the Cardinals, giving up only Eddie Mathews' solo homer in the fourth and one other hit before the Braves touched him for four singles and two runs in the ninth.

But it was Francona, acquired from Cleveland during the winter, and Gagliano, who spent most of last season in the minor leagues, who supplied the spark.

They combined for the Cardinals second run in the second when Francona's line drive got by Lee Maye for a triple and Gagliano hit a sacrifice fly.

Francona singled in the big fifth and Gagliano drove a pitch deep to center field for another sacrifice fly..

"Gagliano will stay in there against lefthanded and right-handed pitchers." Schoendienst said. "I'll platoon Francona. But I can't take those two out now."

In fact, the bench looked so good to Schoendienst, that he considered giving ailing Ken Boyer a rest. The third baseman has a sore side.

"If the day off tomorrow, Thursday, doesn't help, I'll probably use Ed Spiezio," Schoendienst said. "If a player can't give 100 per cent physically, he's best on the bench until he's healthy."

The Cardinals open a week-long road trip Friday in Cincinnati.

Don Demeter's two-out run-scoring double in the fourth inning beat Kansas City. Hank Aguirre and Larry Sherry combined to make the run stand up with Aguirre getting the victory.

John O'Donoghue allowed only three hits in 6 1-3 innings, but took his first loss after one victory. Bert Campaneris supplied most of the Kansas City attack with three hits, two of them doubles and Doc Edwards got two hits.

The A's also have an open date today.

THE HANDS OF CHRIST

BROWN with Galilean weather,
Beautiful with Heaven's grace
Were the hands that blessed the children
As they looked upon His face.

Like the petals of the lilies
Were His fingers that were felt
Gently on the blind man's eyelids
As in wayside gloom he knelt.

Hands of brotherly compassion
Long ago the hungry fed,
Give me drink from His heart's fountain,
Break for me the living bread.

Lakers Top Celts

LOS ANGELES AP--"Its anybody's playoff now," said a jubilant Fred Schaus after his Los Angeles Lakers romped to a 126-105 victory over the Boston Celtics Wednesday night in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We have a good chance to win Friday night and then it's just a best-of-3 series," Schaus continued. The victory cut Boston's lead to 2-1, and the Lakers will enjoy the home court advantage again Friday.

If the series goes seven games, two of the final three will be played in Boston, but Schaus said, "We knew from the beginning we had to win in Boston anyway. We feel we have momentum going for us now."

The Lakers' Jerry West, continuing his better than 40-point per game average in the playoffs, hit for 43. LeRoy Ellis contributed 29, and Gene Wiley grabbed 28 rebounds and made several fine defensive plays to go with his 11 points.

Celtic Coarch Red Auerbach was not overly concerned about his team's decisive defeat.

"We were expecting a letdown in the second game, but instead it came in the third," Auerbach said. "I knew in the first three minutes that we were off form, and nothing went right."

Sam Jones continued his fine offensive play for Boston, getting 35 points.

Special Berlin Report From World War II Records

BERLIN AP -- Twenty years ago a Russian army of 2 1/2 million was fighting its last battle, with 41,000 pieces and 6,250 tanks.

The Battle of Berlin began April 16, 1945 with the German capital less than 50 miles away. It took the Russians two weeks to reach the city and obtain its surrender.

The brunt of the attack in the center of a line about 100 miles long was borne by the Soviet Army's 1st Byelorussian Front under Marshal Gregori K. Zhukov.

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky led the drive of his 2nd Byelorussian Front in the north. The southern flank was the responsibility of the Isa Ukranian Front commanded by Marshal Ivan Konev.

The armies had been dug in at the Oder and Neisse rivers for two months, regrouping and gathering strength.

Konev's forces quickly broke out of the bridgehead.

Zhukov was not so fortunate. Facing the bulk of the Nazi forces gathered for defense of Berlin, his forces took about two days to smash their way out of the Kuestrin bridgehead.

While Zhukov's troops were fighting slowly straight toward Berlin, Konev swung two tank armies to the northwest.

The Germans had thrown in their last reserves, old men of 60 and young boys of 16 fought alongside battle - hardened Wehrmacht and SS troops.

But the Russian streamroller was moving and the Nazis retreated, died or surrendered.

By nightfall or April 24, the Zhukov and Konev armies had closed the ring around the city.

Inside Berlin, about 200,000 German troops had taken position. Men, women and children were driven furiously to build roadblocks and gun positions. The city had been largely destroyed by five years of Allied air attacks.

On April 25, Soviet Infantrymen were swarming through the periphery and then set off to advance along a broad front along the Teltow Canal toward city center.

In his bunker behind the Reich Chancellory, Adolf Hitler directed his last stand.

His last appearance above ground probably was April 28 when he decorated a group of Hitler Youths while Russian shells were screaming overhead.

Commandos of the SS roamed parts of the city not yet captured and shot or hanged German soldiers who had deserted.

In an effort to prevent Soviet patrols from penetrating the center of Berlin through the subway, SS troopers flooded the tunnels. Thousands of women and children sheltering there were drowned.

On April 30, Hitler shot himself. His wife of a few days and mistress of many years, Eva Braun, swallowed cyanide.

$2,000,00 Pepsi-Cola Bottlers' shopping spree promotion to offer over 150,000 prizes starting April 19.

$2,000,000 ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN TO HERALD EVENT

The nation will be going on a Shopping Spree again starting April 19 -- to the tune of $2,000,000 with Pepsi - Cola Company and its bottlers picking up the check.

More than 150,000 prizes will be distributed, and a $2,000,000 advertising program will herald the promotion across the country, according to Sidney M. Maran, promotion manager for the company. Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, Inc. is the national advertising agency.

The 1965 Shopping Spree will be bigger than last year's event. It will be, by far, the most expansive promotion ever conducted by Pepsi-Cola Company, and quite possibly, the biggest ever run in any industry.

It will make another giant promotional step forward by hard-selling, promotionally - minded Donald M. Kendall took over the company's presidency 18 months ago.

NATIONAL GRAND PRIZE IS HOUSEFUL OF GROCERIES. .. AND A HOUSE!

Highlight of the 1965 promotion will be the National Grand Prize -- a houseful of groceries . . . and the house.

To get the groceries the National Grand Prize winner and his family will be set loose in a Shopping Spree in the food store of their choice for a full thirty minutes. They will shop absolutely free and keep all the groceries they gather, with Pepsi-Cola Company paying the full retail cost of all food items collected on the check-out tape.

The house will be a Johns-Manville ranch-stule home with kitchen appliances and lot, valued at $40,000.

A total of 731 national prizes will be awarded, including ten Oldsmobile station wagons, plus a year's supply of automotive equipment and services; ten 15-minute shopping sprees for ten entire families; and 710 merchandise gift certificates ranging in value from $1,000 to $100.

The national Shopping Spree theme will be carried through at local level. Pepsi - Cola bottlers will award 20, three minute shopping sprees plus 1400 cases of Pepsi - Cola products in food stores chosen by winners and in each case, pick up the full retail check.

In addition, bottlers will also award a series of prizes during each of six week's duration of the promotion. These prizes will include merchandise certificates redeemable at local participating outlets, plus free Pepsi-Cola Company products.

EXTENSIVE $2,000,000 ADVERTISING EFFORT AT LOCAL, NATIONAL LEVELS

$2,000,000 will be spent by Pepsi - Cola Company and its bottlers to advertise the 1965 promotion.

Approximately 9,000,000 lines of print advertising are slated in newspapers as primary medium at the local level. It is estimated that some 750 daily newspapers will carry 1965 Shopping Spree advertising schedules.

Additionally, local level planning includes scheduling of 40,000 radio and 20,000 television spot announcements, the placement of more than 6,000 30 and 3-sheet postings and the use of 100,000,000 pieces of point-of-sale material in retail outlets across the country.

At the national level, Pepsi-Cola Company will unlimber its heavy consumer advertising guns in support of this promotion starting April 10, when the first of seven, four - color full-page insertions will appear in Progressive Farmers, to be followed by similar insertions in Ebony, Look, Saturday Evening Post and Life. TV Guide and Reader's Digest will carry full-color spreads.

The company will kick off a series of eight national television spots, over all three networks, starting April 18 on the ABC-TV Sunday Night Movie Show.

Additionally, twelve, two - color spread insertions will run in major influential trade publications.

EACH ENTRY QUALIFIES FOR NATIONAL & LOCAL PRIZES: NO LIMIT TO ENTRIES.

According to company officials one entry can qualify for both local and national drawings. Free entry blanks will be available at Pepsi-Cola outlets in individual franchise areas. Entrants simply complete the entry blanks as directed and return to the local bottler at a designated address. There is no limit to the number of entries an individual may submit each week.

In certain states, because of local laws, a special contest has been developed to parallel the over-all National Shopping Spree Promotion.

Below is a short review of 1964 Shoppers Sweepstakes winners.

National First Prize Winners: Mr. and Mrs. Sharol Miller, Taylorville, Illinois.

Prize winning total: $6,274.64 in groceries, 60,746 trading stamps and new Mercury station wagon, on July 29, 1964.

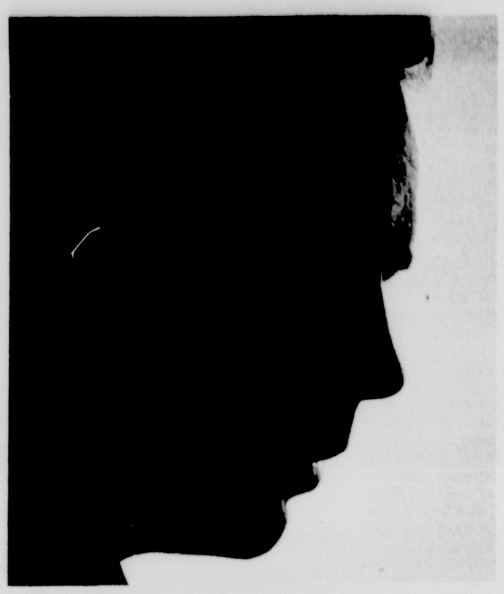
This story is taken from SCENE, Southwestern Bell Telephone magazine of April 1965. One of its stories is here for you to enjoy, it features a Sikeston man that is on his way up.

Good telephone service is essential to today's modern businesses and institutions. That's why Roy Beck, Cape Girardeau communications engineer, devotes full time to



MEETING THE CUSTOMER'S NEEDS

ASK CAPE GIRARDEAU'S ROY BECK how he assesses his job, and you'll get an answer like this:

"It's a real challenge. You're dealing with the customer's day-to-day problems and generally you're able to recommend communications that will help solve these problems."

Beck and others like him throughout the company spend a lot of time and thought each day making recommendations "that actually will help." That's his job – communications engineer.

It's Beck's responsibility to help business customers with their often complex communications needs. To do this, he must be something of a Sherlock Holmes. He must learn all he can about the businesses and institutions he serves to determine their communications requirements accurately. When he learns what needs exist, he must make sound recommendations.

Many of Beck's customers are right in Cape Girardeau. Others are scattered throughout almost 50 towns in southeast Missouri.

Beck contacts customers in two ways. Often, a businessman will request a particular type of service. It's Beck's job to find out if the service requested will fill the bill or whether he should suggest some alternative. In other cases, Beck originates the contact by suggesting ways in which a customer can benefit by use of additional communications facilities. In both cases, the job calls for a thorough knowledge of available services and their practical application.

Obviously, Beck's job involves more than merely preparing a sales order memo and tossing it on the desk of a service order writer. For example, his work brings him into frequent contact with other departments. He consults often with engineering department people to determine what equipment will be needed to provide the service a customer wants. Traffic comes into the picture in many ways, including "busy line studies" to determine if calls are getting through to a businessman. If callers are getting frequent busy signals, Beck uses this as persuasive evidence for improved service. After proper equipment has been selected, it's the plant department's turn to take center stage with an efficient and timely installation job.

Throughout the complicated sequence which transforms an abstract communications need into the reality of telephone equipment and service, Beck serves as liaison between the customer and various departments within the company. But his responsibility doesn't end there. He also makes sure the new service is performing to the customer's expectations, meeting his needs.

Beck keeps his appointments calendar up to date. He'd be lost without it.

"I try to spend as much time as possible actually visiting my customers," says Beck. But of course personal visits are only part of the job. There's work to be done in the office, too. Occasionally there are letters to be written. Appointments must be made. Accurate records must be maintained. Also, there are telephone contacts with customers which Beck must handle personally.

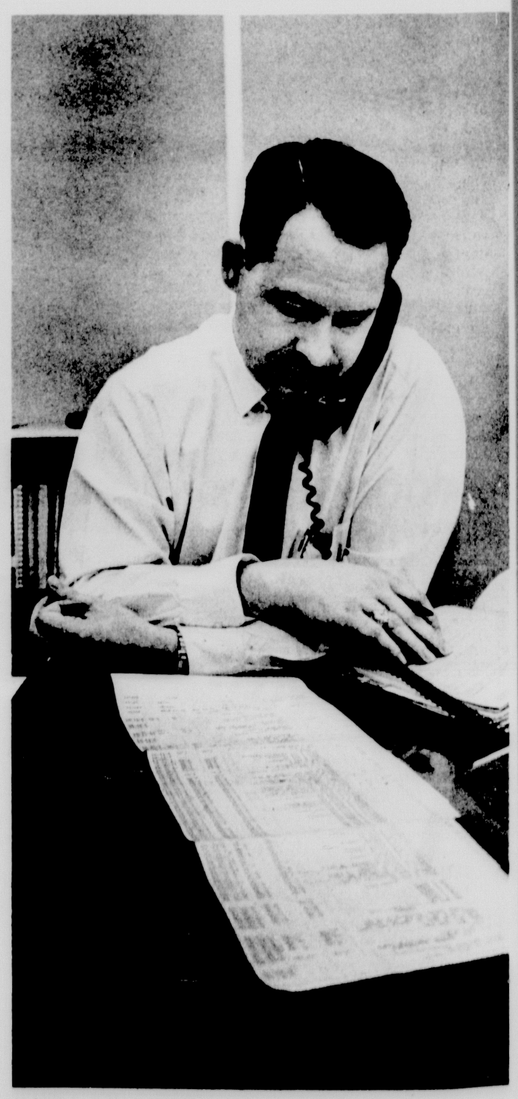
When he talks on the telephone, Beck is careful to give his customers time to explain their problems fully. He checks his records frequently during conversations. There are plenty of records to check. There's an IBM "printout" of the customer's present equipment called a PBX or Key System Record. Often there's a Busy Line Report based on a traffic department study. Beck also keeps a record of each contact, providing a handy history of a customer's service. And there are other records and references. It's a job which calls for a keen sense of order. Beck masters the paper work, it doesn't master him.

Previous experience has proved helpful to Beck in his present job. After graduating from high school in Sikeston, his home town, Beck felt he needed more education and spent a year at a business college in Kentucky. Returning to Sikeston, Beck worked several years with an electric cooperative before joining the telephone company in 1959. He worked as a business representative in Sikeston until moving to his present job in 1963.

Living all his life in southeast Missouri undoubtedly contributes to Beck's effectiveness as a communications engineer. He believes wholeheartedly in the future of the area. "Things are beginning to happen," he says. "And there are a lot of good people here."

Yes, Roy Beck has a real stake in southeast Missouri. This is where he married his wife, Beverly. This is where his two daughters were born.

As Beck leaves the telephone building after work, he can look east down the easy slope of Broadway and see the Mississippi. Cape was a bustling river town during its early days. Then the steamboats left and the town went into a quiet slumber. Today it's changing. Population is on the upswing. New businesses are moving into the area. They bring their communications problems with them. Roy Beck will be the man to help them find the solutions.



When a customer asks a question, Beck must either know the answer or know where to find it quickly.

Beauty Routine Tones Skin

Combat wrinkles and aging dryness with nightly facial massages. Select a moisturizing cream. Apply lightly. Work with the forefingers in an upward circular movement. Start (left) with the chewing muscles. Work firmly on the forehead (center) and don't neglect under the chin (right). Finish by placing hands separately on the throat, fingers spread and work with firm downward motion. (DuBarry)

This is the time when a woman's skin reflects the full impact of fluctuating seasonal temperatures. The day-to-day cliff-hanger weather proves especially irritating to dry or mature skin.

Just run your hands over your upper arms and elbows. Do they pass the touch test? Take a good look at your face and neck in strong light. Do they have a parched look? If they do, they need daily care.

Each night cleanse your face thoroughly with a cream cleanser and skin freshener. Apply a hypo-allergenic moisturizing cream. The mature woman needs one that contains natural oils normally found in healthy young skins.

How you apply such a cream is as important to your skin health as the cream itself.

A beautician (for DuBarry) suggests this nightly routine before you go to bed:

- Apply the moisturizing cream sparingly with two fingers. Massage the chewing muscles using upward circular motions.
- Use forefingers to massage laugh lines. Start from bottom of chin and massage upward.
- Continue to massage around the nostrils, on the bridge of the nose and gently around the eyes.
- The forehead calls for firm circular massaging.
- Finish your facial massage by placing your hands separately on your throat with fingers spread widely apart. Massage in a firm downward movement.

These massage exercises, when done properly, contribute to over-all skin health and muscle tone.

PURCHASING

85. Recommendation:

That the Purchasing Agent shall prepare and enforce uniform specifications for office equipment in state offices. These specifications shall enable offices to exchange furniture and commonly used equipment without inconveniencing work procedures.

Current practices allow departmental supervisors decision authority in types and kinds of office equipment purchased. Absence of equipment uniformity resulting from this practice limit interchanging equipment and furniture among offices; and blanket contracts for purchasing commonly used equipment and furniture are difficult to prepare.

Offices now purchase steel filing cabinets of different sizes; however, a standard size in terms of drawer capacity could be generally acceptable. A greater cost variation arises from offices requesting specific finishes for matching the colors of other office furniture. These individual office specifications have caused the prices paid for five-drawer filing cabinets to range from $69.80 to $85.35 and the prices for four-drawer cabinets--a smaller cabinet--to range from $89.60 to $276.97 during a two-month period. Attention is directed to the prison industries' price list for four-drawer filing cabinets during that same period--a four-drawer filing cabinet with a lock was priced at $65.00.

Adopting uniform specifications for office furniture will permit prison industries to purchase machinery for manufacturing equipment and furniture needed by the state. Experience indicates prison industries' prices tend to be lower on comparable items. Uniform office equipment will enable idle equipment to be transferred to underfurnished offices with minimum inconvenience. Uniform office equipment specifications will allow the Purchasing Agent to consolidate agencies' equipment needs, and negotiate more favorable blanket purchasing contracts on an annual basis.

Uniform office equipment and furniture specifications can save the state a considerable amount of money.

86. Recommendation:

That the Purchasing Agent shall prepare and distribute regularly a list of useful surplus property; and that such property shall be described to enable agencies and institutions to calculate restoration or repair costs if such equipment were acquired.

An essential part of a program to distribute useful surplus property includes notifying all agencies about the equipment available. Agencies, branch offices, and institutions outside Jefferson City may have difficulty finding what surplus property is available, and what costs might be expected to repair surplus property.

The 1965 Commission can again cite filing cabinets as an example. At least thirty metal four-drawer filing cabinets were observed in the state's surplus property section during the summer and fall of 1964. Some of these cabinets needed only paint; some needed minor repairs--all painting and repairing could have been done inexpensively by prison industries.

Agencies and institutions should be informed of these opportunities to obtain useful surplus property. Redistribution of useful surplus equipment could save a considerable amount of money now spent for new equipment.

87. Recommendation:

That the capabilities and policies of the prison industries be made known to all state agencies and institutions; and that after allowing six months for the dissemination of such information, the Attorney General shall invoke the penalty provisions against all violators of Sections 216.510 and 216.515, RSMo 1959.

A part of Missouri's purchasing legislation deals with the role of the prison industries in producing finished goods and supplies used by state agencies and institutions. Chapter 216, Sections 216.475 to 216.520, RSMo 1959, may be summarized into the following provisions:

(1) All institutions and agencies are required to furnish the director of prison industries with an estimate of their demands for his products during the coming year--estimates are to be in the director's hands by May 1 each year.

(2) An Industrial Advisory Board appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, is to counsel with the director of prison industries; and decisions are to be reached concerning what institutional agency demands for products shall be filled by prison industries.

(3) The director of prison industries is to use such decisions as directions to enter into contracts for raw materials sufficient to supply state institutions and agencies with required products as planned.

(4) The director of prison industries is to prepare a descriptive list of all available products by July 1 each year. The list shall be distributed to all institutions and agencies.

(5) The statutes prescribe strict penalties for all persons subject to these laws, who fail to abide by their provisions. Violators of the statutes are subject to fines ranging from $50 to $100 or imprisonment for a period from three months to one year. Institutional purchasers may avoid buying prison industry products upon certification by the director of prison industries that such products are not available within reasonable time limits.

Missourians Rough It Says Mr. Fine

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missourians like to rough it but want all the comforts of home, State Park Director Lee Fine told the Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday night.

Fine said there is a real hunger for outdoor recreation as evidenced by the more than nine million persons who visited the state parks last year.

It is a sophisticated hunger, however.

Campers are no longer satisfied with a pup tent, sleeping bag, hand axe and fishing pole. They come in plush camp trailers now, some equipped with television sets.

Many prefer electricy to the campfire and the late, late show to contemplating under the stars.

They want convenient sanitation facilities, tap water and telephone nearby.

Not all outdoormen have succumbed to such comforts, of course, but many of the casual campers demand them, Fine said.

Providing these utilities in the 33 existing state parks and in the three new ones being developed is the big task faced by the Park Board.

Installing modern rest rooms and sewage facilities to meet Division of Health standards throughout the system would cost the state close to $1 million.

A third of this amount already has been approved by the legislature in an emergency measure to get improvements underway for this summer's camping clientele.

The House already has okayed the rest and the Senate is expected to follow suit since the governor recommended it. Most state agencies having anything to do with the outdoors support it and the federal government is encouraging wide-scale development with attractive matching funds.

The Park Board also has a list of scores of other improvements it would like to make but can't because the earnings won't stretch to cover all of them.

To project the big picture on outdoor recreation the board estimated the total cost at more than $3.5 million over the next two years.

Earnings being what they are, the governor suggested $352,130 to finance cabin repair, camp ground development and lake work next year.

The House trimmed this slightly.

Fine suggested the Senate delete a section calling for $820,000 to build swimming pools, boat harbors and cabin facilities at some parks.

This money would come out of the board's building fund which is financed by revenue bonds.

Earlier Tuesday the committee heard testimony from Dr. Elmer Ellis, president of the University of Missouri, and chancellors from the four campuses in the university system.

Ellis urged the Senate to restore funds cut by the House. He asked for an additional $3 million in operating costs and selected capital improvements trimmed or omitted in either the governor's budget or the House bill.

Much of the operating increase is needed to bring teacher salaries to a competitive level with other Midwestern universities, Ellis said.

He said the university -- including the Rolla, St. Louis and Kansas City branches -- needs at least $62 million to operate during the next year.

Some $43 million would come from the state. The rest would come from federal grants, donations and other sources.

Ellis also warned the committee Missouri is slipping further behind in its building program. He suggested that if the state cannot step up its building program through normal appropriations every consideration should be given to financing the facilities through a state bond issue.

A proposed constitutional change is pending in a House committee to permit the state to issue up to $150 million in bonds for a state building program.

Today, cockfighting is prohibited in Canada, England and most states of the Union, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing a copy of a letter I recently received from my brother, Rikki, who has been in the Merchant Marines since 1940. This letter I thought might be of interest to you and your readers, inasmuch, as it has to do with our battles in South Vietnam.

Briefly, my brother is a Purser with the Pacific Far East Lines, Inc. His seniority allows him to choose his ships and occasionally he chooses the sleek new cargo ships and was aboard the California Bear at the time this letter was written. It brings home to us, at least to me, our real reason for being in South Vietnam. These are facts that come from one "who was there."

His opinions of MacArthur and Truman are his own, and his having been through the Korean War and World War II he obviously has his own reasons for those expressions of opinion.

If you feel that this is of interest you have my permission to reprint it.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
Joe Leslie

SS California Bear
Saigon, South Vietnam
April 8, 1965

Dear Joe,

This trip has taken me to Japan (Yokohama & Kobe), Korea (Pusan & Inchon), Formosa (Keelung and Takao) and now to Saigon, where we arrived today and will spend the next five days. After we leave here we go to Bangkok, the one place I've never been, but always wanted to see. After Bangkok, back to Japan (Moji, Nagoya, Kobe, Yokohama) then home about the middle of May.

Saigon is a large city about five hours up the Mekong River from the sea. The Mekong is a deep but narrow river that winds and turns and writhes through the most desolate jungled swampland in the world. Only once in miles do you see a rice paddy or a cleared patch of ground perhaps two acres big under cultivation. The rest of the time it is just a monotony of dwarfed jungle bush and black mud. The ground is perfectly flat for as far as the horizon on both sides of the river, bordered on the east by a range of mountains; bordered on the west by the horizon . . . that swamp is infested with the Viet Cong. Completely encircling Saigon, the Viet Cong is a force that is almost felt rather than ever seen. Everyone knows they are there; everyone knows they are in Saigon too, but who knows who is on which side? They are all of the same nationality, so who do you shoot? They can seal the river and block the port any time they choose to do so, for all it would take is one mine planted at a hair-pin turn in the river and a ship would block all traffic. They just don't want to block the river yet, for they feel that it is not yet the time to do so . . . It is said that half the supplies we bring here get to the Viet Cong anyway so they don't want to cut off their own source of supplies. . . Occasionally, a concentration of them are discovered, or they have a meeting somewhere and our Intelligence gets wind of it and then we can hit them. Seldom can we hit with force, for they just fade into the terrain, but now and then we do flush them out . . .

This morning at 7:30 we were only about thirty miles up the river from the sea when we heard the first explosion . . . We went out on deck and became ring-siders at a real air show! One after another of our dive bombers came circling in over an area between four and five miles from us, apparently where they had found a large enough concentration of Viet Cong and Viet Cong supplies to hit them. We watched for over two hours, until we were too far up river to see anything more, while the planes came in, circled, peeled off one at a time and made their bombing dive on the place. We watched the bombs fall, the explosion rise from the ground and mushroom into the sky and five seconds later heard the roar of the bombs. Once, at least, we are certain they hit an ammunition dump because there was one hell of a big secondary explosion.

It was quite a show and there were over fifty of our dive bombers in the act, so it was an important strike. Perhaps tomorrow the Saigon papers will tell us what it was all about. Anyway, it was a first hand look at a little war that so many Americans can't accept as the real thing. Those were real planes, real bombs and real people getting blown to hell over there in that swampland. . . This part of the Oriental world is struggling for its very existence against the Communist world that has swallowed up one little country after another . .. and could have been stopped by MacArthur at the time Truman fired him. This is a continuation of Korea in a different land and by a different means. . . No more army against army, but neighbor against neighbor; Vietnamese against his brother. Look at a hundred stevedores on the docks of Saigon and try to guess which one is capable of planting a bomb on the ship. . . Look at any group in a restaurant here and try to guess which are Viet Cong . . . Yet those are the people who are waging a war that is intended to add another little country to the communist octapus. Lose this place to the Communists and we lose Asia, for the rest will go quickly if Uncle Sam cannot be depended upon to save even this one little country. Losa Asia and the Philippines and then goes Africa and then South America and the world is a place no longer fit for our children to inherit from us. This little country here, which is such a desolate and poor place and so seemingly unimportant to the welfare of America is a keypoint in the future of the world and therefore to the future of America. We have laid it on the line here and this time we can't back down. . . We can't have another such debacle as that of Korea when Mac Arthur could have settled the Communist question for the next fifty years by kicking hell out of China at a time when we could have done it cheaply, but Truman thought he could solve it by his own bluster and blow!

Your Brother

Saturday Fine Arts Banquet Nearing Sellout

Robert E. Bliss who will be honored guest and featured speaker at the Fine Arts Festival Banquet on Saturday evening at 6:30 is a native Missourian who has received much from his native state in the education and inspiration to achieve the heights in a musical career. Now his life is dedicated to passing on to other young people that which he has received.

Mr. Bliss attended elementary and high schools in Kansas City where he started his study of the piano at the age of seven. At twelve he added the organ to his interests. Studying and advancing he soon assumed the post of assistant organist in his home church. At around the same time he commenced the study of the voice with the late Mrs. Russell Rizer of Kansas City and later with Mr. Whit Hall of Washington, D. C. He has his Bachelor of Arts degree in Music from the University of Kansas City (now a part of the University of Missouri) and has done much graduate study there in addition to taking advanced work with such notable artist-teachers as Mr. Fred Dufflemeyer on the piano, Dr. William Lemmonds whose time is in great demand as a teacher of organ, and vocalist Mr. Hardin van Deursen. Mr. Bliss has filled the position of organist-choirmaster in many of Kansas City's leading churches in addition to his teaching committments at the University of Missouri, and he is now serving at the Zion United Church of Christ at St. Joseph, Missouri.

Mr. Bliss holds an honorary membership in the American Choral Conductors' Guild, and is a member of the American Guild of Organists, Missouri Music Educators Association, Music Educators' National Conference, and the Missouri State Teachers' Association. He has served his country in the U. S. Marine Reserve and the U. S. Air Force for a total of eight years.

Mr. Bliss has devoted much of his time to work in Music Therapy at the Missouri State Hospital Number 2 at St. Joseph, to public school teaching in both vocal and instrumental music and the Allied Arts. He is frequently called upon to present workshops and clinics or lectures in church music, to judge high school musical events, conduct choir festivals, and as an oratorio and cantata soloist.

The appearance of Mr. Bliss at the Fine Arts Festival Banquet is the result of the fine support given to the burgeoning Arts Festival by the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce. Everyone who is interested in any facet of the fine arts should be present to share with his fellows in an excitingly different experience. Every event connected with the Festival this year, as was the case at the innaugural Festival a year ago, is an outpouring of the joy which those who work and play in the area of the arts wish to share with the entire community of Southeast Missouri as well as any travellers who may come for a sample or stay for the whole feast. Admission charges are limited to the vanishing point but due to the many hours of voluntary service by members of all organizations involved the results promise to be quite professional.

One of the notable contributions by a local group will be the decor for the banquet which is being provided by the Meadow Lane Garden Club (inadvertantly omitted in earlier notices). Mrs. Ruth Lee is president of the club and many of the members are busily engaged and working with the members of Rose Gate Club to turn the banquet hall into a veritable bower. Many Sikestonians have reason to feel that with all the floral arrangements provided by the Meadow Lane and Rose Gate Clubs the deocrations alone will be worth attending these events to see.

Attendance is limited to 250 for the banquet although the other events will be able to accommodate a much larger number. Tickets priced at a ridiculously low $2.00 are going fast, but you can still find a few at one of the three Sikeston Banks or by calling or seeing the presidents of the participating groups; or banquet committee members as follows: Mrs. Tom Chidester, Mrs. Earl Jarvis, Mr. Tony Statler, Richard Smith, Harold Jones, Mr. Sam Harbin, Miss Jane Wilkerson, or Mrs. Ruth Lee.

An additional attraction and one worthy of special note will be the music to be provided by Miss Linda Wilson, Camdenton, harpist, a most attractive and talented young lady.

Dry Ice Helps Planes Get Through Fog

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A commercial airline says there is a way to get through the winter fogs which tie up many airports.

For this you need a small plane with a hole in it and some ground-up dry ice.

When fog stops the airliners, up goes the small plane. Once over the airport, the pilot begins shoving the dry-ice pellets through a hole in the side or bottom of the plane.

United Air Lines says that more than 80 per cent of the time a corridor opens in the fog, big enough to allow liners to land and take off. Sometimes the corridor lasts all day.

It took nearly 20 years to convince United Air Lines officials.

Last winter United tried it 74 times at 6 airports and it worked 60 times. Some 5,500 passengers got through, including 2,000 on rival lines.

The procedure has been used at Medford, Ore., for 15 years.

United has used it successfully on a small scale for two winters. The airline thinks it should be extended to at least 12 other airports, including Washington, Detroit and Chicago.

It will not work every place. Los Angeles, for example, probably can expect no fog relief.

Northern airports will benefit because their fog occurs at colder temperatures.

What makes it work is the dry ice, which is frozen carbon dioxide. It is 110 degrees below zero Fahrenheit when solidified. United officials say it works best when the fog occurs at temperatures between 24 and 28 degrees. This is called super-cooled fog.

This is what they believe happens:

When dry ice pellets are released, they begin to turn to gas. This takes heat from the air. In this intense cooling, moisture begins to collect into ice particles and to descend. They pick up other particles and eventually turn into a light snow. No fog remains.

Mississippi Beginning To Cause Determination In Mo.

LOUISIANA, Mo. AP -- Along the Mississippi between St. Louis and Hannibal, Mo., the river people stare the threat of a flood in the face from beneath furled eyebrows with grim determination.

It is nothing new. It's part of their lives.

They lived through high water last week that forced about 50 residents from their homes in Louisiana, Mo., and flooded Hannibal's Main Street.

Now, an even greater flood is expected to hit there when the Minnesota crests arrive downriver in about a week.

Already the river surrounds some of their farm silos. In Louisiana, an implement dealer has erected a sandbag wall around the front of his store. Sandbags also were used last week to turn the water away from downtown firms in Hannibal, where a board sidewalk was built on blocks to permit Easter shopping.

In Winfield to the south, Joe Kimberly got into his Jon boat with his small daughter, Gail, and rowed out to his pasture to pull debris from around his fences.

"If I don't do it now, when the water goes down the trash will just be sitting there," he said, pointing to the tops of fence posts jutting several inches above the surface. "Or the current pushing against the debris might knock the fences down."

Meanwhile, the favorite sport in the area is gigging and netting fish trapped when the river backed up over the lowlands and then fell suddenly.

And one of the principal topice of discussion is the threat of more levees breaking upriver.

While they don't wish any bad luck on their northern neighbors, they know each break upstream relieves the flood pressure on them.

Police Chief Notices Crime Done

COLUMBUS, Ga. AP -- Police Chief Clyde Adair was watching a local wrestling match on television and saw a possible crime committed.

The show featured Mario Galento who had won his match when a spectator climbed into the ring. The newcomer was Billy Boy Hines, also a wrestler.

The chief said Galento swung at Hines, hitting him in the face. With the blow, pennies scattered over the ring. Adair ordered on investigation.

Galento was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge for having a roll of pennies in his fist when he hit Hines. He was released on $77 bond pending a trial in Recorder's Court today.

Plentiful Foods Join Signs of Spring

Signs of spring in food stores during the next few weeks may well be in the form of a variety of items -- fresh, canned and dried -- all in bountiful supply.

According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Plentiful Foods List for April, consumers should find spring-like abundances of eggs; dried prunes and peas; broiler-fryers, honey; canned pears and pink salmon; and fresh cabbage, carrots and onions.

Outstanding among these plentiful items, reports USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, are eggs and prunes. Supplies of both are expected to be well above last year, with attractive consumer prices likely.

One of the best values in meaty foods is likely to be broiler-fryers. Even more of these tender birds are headed for market this April than a year ago.

Honey, for table use or cooking, is likely to be in the spotlight this month also. Last year's crop made available the largest supply of honey in more than 10 years.

Among canned goods, shoppers should find particularly large and dependable displays of both pears and pink salmon. Sizable "crops" of each were packed last year.

Dry peas--a natural supplement for the meatless meals still to be planned in Lent--are available in a supply that is larger than normal consumption.

Fresh vegetables from Texas and Florida--specifically cabbage, carrots and onions--also will be among the most plentiful foods during April.

15th Anniversary Of Silly Putty

NEW YORK AP -- Lest it be overlooked in the rush of world events, this Easter season is the 15th anniversary of the introduction of a chemical curiosity that has bounced its way around the globe.

It was discovered as a by-product of the government's effort to create synthetic rubber during World War II. And it was useless - useless, that is, until a flat - broke advertising and marketing specialist came across it.

The specialist, Peter Hodgson, 48, named it Silly Putty. He is no longer flat broke.

Hodgson made the pink substance into a multimillion-dollar adult toy which soon found its best market among children.

Silly Putty came into being in 1944. James Wright, an engineer working in General Electric's New Haven, Conn., laboratory, tossed a handful of boric acid into some silicone oil, a liquid refined from sand. The gooey result bounced when he tossed it on the floor, but failed as a substitute for rubber.

Nevertheless, it remained around for years, a conversation piece and plaything for Wright's friends and professional colleagues, mainly for its seemingly contradictory qualities.

It can be stretched or molded; balled up, it will bounce; struck suddenly with a hammer, it will shatter; flattened out, it will pick up pictures from a comic book; left alone, it will flow slower than molasses into a tired puddle.

Hodgson, born in Montreal, and raised in Norfolk, Va., had been a seaman, advertising copy writer, marketing consultant, wartime railroad troop traffic manager and magazine research director. But he was broke and jobless when he found his gold mine.

Working in a basement with a Yale student as a helper, Hodgson had to borrow $147.50 to pay for the first shipment of the substance. He put small amounts of silly putty into toy plastic eggs retailing for $1 and got them onto the national market.

Within six months, 30 Yale students were helping Hodgson crate the orders and he was counting a clear profit of $10,000.

Now 125 employes help him in a $6-million annual business. In addition to the New Haven plant, there is a subsidiary operation in Canada. He is negotiating to open others this year in Japan and West Germany and just received an inquiry about a possible plant in Mexico.

And the once flat broke advertising man relaxes on an 83-acre hilltop at Madison, Conn., with a swimming pool, tennis court and an old farmhouse 400 feet above the Long Island Sound boasting a view stretching almost from Orient Point to Oyster Bay.

"I can trace most everything I have to silly putty," said Hodgson, pleased.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I were deeply interested in your counsel that parents should NOT be expected to support children who marry in college. This is what happened in our family:

Our eldest son, (21), a junior at Yale, handsome, bright and promising, fell in love with a 19-year-old girl who attends a nearby school. They wanted to marry during spring vacation. We told our son we felt an obligation to educate him, but not to support him and a wife. We agreed to continue his usual allowance until he finished law school, but nothing more.

The parents of the girl decided our son was too good a catch to lose. They offered a lavish wedding, a beautiful bungalow, (completely furnished, of course) and agreed to pay all their living expenses -- indefinitely.

Our son now considers us "stingy, unco-operative, and downright mean." The girl's parents are "generous, loyal and understanding." We rarely see our son and his wife. The girl's parents see them a great deal. Was it worth it to stand by our principles? Sometimes I feel the price was too high. -- HEARTACHE IN NEW HAVEN

Dear Heartache: Unfortunately your son and his girl were for sale to the highest bidder and her parents put in the high bid.

This is a dismal picture, and not an uncommon one. I can only say I hope your son wakes up and recognizes the situation for what it is. The whole thing smells like last week's fish to me.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl who will be 16 years old next month. I have to share a bedroom with my 12-year-old brother who is retarded. I love my brother very much and I try to help him all I can but I do feel a girl my age should have some privacy.

When my girl friend invites me to stay overnight I am so envious that I an hardly stand it because she has a bedroom all to herself.

Dad admits we could afford to live in a larger place but he says it isn't necessary. Please say something to help me. -- BETTY BLUE

Dear Betty: A 16-year-old girl should not be sharing a bedroom with her younger brother. This is not good for either of you. I am adding my voice to yours in the hope that you will be moving to a larger place very soon. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is an executive. We frequently give cocktail parties, usually during convention time when the town is loaded with my husband's colleagues.

We love to entertain and people tell us we do it well. We plan our parties carefully. Although the atmosphere is casual and informal, a great deal of thought goes into the selection of the guests. Our home is not large and we have learned that too many guests can be deadly. Often we must leave off the names of folks we'd like to invite in order to insure a group of the right size.

Certain guests invariably bring four or six of their friends along. Somethings they phone ahead but usually they just show up at the door with the extras. The greeting generally goes like this: "Surprise! Look Who I brought." Or -- "I knew you wouldn't mind." They feel, apparently, that just because it isn't a sit-down dinner it's all right.

Is there a solution to this problem? -- ONE-DOWNSMANSHIP

Dear One: When guests arrive at your door with uninvited extras you are trapped.

Anticipate the problem when you do the inviting. Say, "We can comfortably accommodate only a limited number of guests in our home, so please don't bring anyone with you."

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

News Media Not Complete, Govt. Tells What To Do

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — In World War II and in Korea, regulations for news coverage of armed conflict involving U.S. servicemen came from the military.

In Viet Nam, such information is under the supervision of the U.S. Information Service, a unit of the U.S. Information Agency, whose objective is to present the image of the United States in the most favorable light.

USIA is an independent agency under the policy direction of the White House and the State Department.

U.S. military briefing officers in Viet Nam are subordinate to Barry Zorthian, head of USIS in Viet Nam. He has criticized reporters in private for stories which did not violate security but which he thought were unfavorable to the United States.

Daily briefings on military operations are held in Saigon by Lt. Col. L. A. Breault, but they are held at USIS headquarters. Breault held a similar post in Korea, but his information came from Army intelligence and did not have to be cleared by USIS.

George Beebe, managing editor of the Miami (Fla.) Herald and president of The Associated Press Managing Editors Association, said in Miami Tuesday that USIA control of military briefings "should be of deep concern to the people of the United States."

Beebe in a statement said editors fear the American public is not getting "the full story nor the true story" of the war in Viet Nam.

A set of 20 ground rules for coverage of air strikes in Viet Nam was issued a week ago. Zorthian signed these as "minister-counselor of public affairs" although Col. Ben Lagare is the press information officer for the U.S. Military Assistance Command.

Zorthian's memorandum states that the rules "must be observed by official briefers and other American and Vietnamese official personnel."

It says information that will "normally be released as soon as available" includes the target hit, nationality of the striking force, whether the aircraft was land-based or naval, general characterization of the success of the mission, ordnance expended and tonnage, numbers of strike and support planes in round numbers, general description of enemy antiaircraft ground fire, and pilot sightings of unfriendly aircraft.

The memorandum prohibits disclosure of information on aircraft taking off on strikes, identification of land bases or location of bases from which aircraft were launched, number of aircraft damaged, or enemy air reaction other than that actually seen by strike personnel. The total aircraft lost will be released when recovery operations are completed.

Correspondents do not object to regulations issued for security reasons. But they object strongly to a policy of not allowing free access to military personnel unless an "escort officer" is present. The newsmen feel this inhibits military personnel during interviews.

Beef Roast To Be Bargain This Week

A wide variety of beef roasts may turn up with bargain prices this weekend at food markets in much of the nation.

And with the end of Lent and the Easter holidays there are more eggs available, which nearly always means lower prices. Egg prices may continue at bargain rates for another weekend or two.

And the end of the meatless meals during Lent has given a pickup to the demand for pork, so wholesale prices already high — were moving a bit higher.

One national supermarket chain has plenty of beef roast bargains for its New York City area outlets this weekend. A variety of boneless roasts is going for 85 cents a pound. Chuck roasts are at 59 and boneless chuck at 69. Sirloin steak is down 10 cents a pound at 89.

Eggs also dropped 2 to 4 cents a dozen, but there were no bargains in pork.

The West Coast was the only area reporting slightly higher wholesale prices for some beef cuts. Fresh pork items showed a downward trend there at the wholesale level.

Strawberries are moving into many sections of the nation this week from Louisiana, Texas and California.

Rhubarb, watermelons and cantaloup melons are also starting to market.

Among the better vegetable buys are cabbage, carrots, corn, onions, peppers and squash.

Swastikas Over Latin America

Dr. Binder Fights a Battle

By BOB COCHNAR
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) Latin-American politics, to the North American observer, is often a combustible mixture of coup and countercoup, revolution and confusion not particularly important.

But add the specter of Naziism to this simmering political stew and you glimpse the 15-year ordeal of Theodor Binder, jungle doctor.

This soft-spoken man with piercing gray eyes, a disciple of Albert Schweitzer and a refugee from Nazi terrorism, arrived in 1948 to work with diseased and illiterate Indians and mestizos in Peru's interior. But he did not escape from Adolf Hitler.

"I was soon reintroduced to Naziism," Theodor Binder explained in his German-accented English during a visit to New York recently. "We were invited to the home of a rich German planter and on the wall of his main room was a big picture of Hitler.

"He asked if I had any German newspapers with me. I said 'no,' and explained why. I was immediately ordered out of his house."

Binder soon discovered that Peru's Nazi community was and is flourishing. "Hitler's pictures are all over. These sad people have regular meetings and spend much of their time trying to convince Peruvians that Hitler was right and that the concentration camps were Hollywood propaganda. They are dangerous."

* * *

In the beginning, neither Dr. Binder nor his wife Carmen paid serious attention to the Nazis. The Binders had come to Peru to start a hospital. And in 1955, a group of well-equipped buildings rose from the tangled rain forests and fetid swamps of the country's interior.

Money poured in for its support—from Germany, Switzerland, Sweden. A U. S. foundation was established for the Hospital Amazonico Albert Schweitzer. Boston's Cardinal Cushing contributed $10,000.

In Peru, the government and several wealthy families also give Binder aid—among them, Maria Louisa Gildemeister, head of the powerful and respected family which is Peru's largest sugar exporter.

With that contribution, Theodor Binder and his hospital apparently became political tools.

"Miss Gildemeister was the head of our Lima foundation," Dr. Binder said. "But when the government thought about passing land reform bills about two years ago which would have deprived her of some of her holdings, she decided to fight. I think she planned to use our hospital as a political battleground. Perhaps she felt that discrediting me would help her."

Reports were circulated to everyone who had a connection with the hospital—even in Europe—that "I was a Communist, that I was a Nazi war criminal, that I wasn't a doctor, that I wasn't Theodor Binder."

* * *

Peru's Gildemeister family has been a potent political and economic force for more than a century. Its New York bank says "it is very well regarded by Peru's banking and commercial people." With such backing, the rumors about Dr. Binder were not taken lightly. Der Spiegel, Germany's influential news magazine, wrote a critical account of the hospital. The German press circulated stories that Binder was misusing contributions to the hospital, that he didn't take proper care of patients, that he committed sexual offenses against nurses and patients.

Said Binder: "It was filthy. And none of it—not a shred of it—was true. They succeeded in uniting Peru's Communists and the Nazis against me."

Official Peru then cast a stormy look in the direction of the beleaguered hospital. The minister of public health, whom Binder says is a close friend of the Gildemeister family, ordered an investigation.

"We welcomed the investigation," the doctor recounts, "until we found that three of the four men to be sent were our worst enemies. So we refused to allow them to enter the hospital."

The Peruvian press was then invited by Binder to visit the hospital. "And all the papers and magazines, with the exception of one controlled by the Gildemeisters, exploded the rumors and printed the truth."

* * *

Since the propaganda stopped the flow of funds from Germany, the doctor last February invited two members of the board of the U. S. foundation to inspect the hospital. Their verdict, as several German newspapers reported, was that "all of the allegations are false."

Yet the rumors persist and funds are still frozen in Germany. "Miss Gildemeister has much money," Dr. Binder says, "and she has told me she will not rest until I leave Peru. But I will never leave."

The Nazis haven't stopped fighting, either. Binder maintains that former SS generals walk freely through Lima streets. "They and their foul friends are fiercely anti-Semitic. They poison the atmosphere. And they have had their bad effect on Peruvians."

But the jungle doctor, his wife and staff refuse to allow their enemies to stop the work of the hospital. They treat some 400 outpatients a week and about 40 bed patients. A grant from an American foundation sponsors research in fungus diseases.

U. S. Peace Corpsmen have worked at the Hospital Amazonico Albert Schweitzer. Theodor Binder still hopes to establish clinics elsewhere in Peru.

THE WORK GOES ON: Theodor and Carmen Binder treat the sick and fight political enemies at the same time.

SPOKANE, Wash., AP--Capt. Ernest C. Pintler of the Spokane County sheriff's department was embarrassed by having to report the theft of his own car.

Capt. Pintler said he had left the keys in the car, taken from his driveway early Tuesday.

Police arrested Norreen D. Schenk, 26, and charged her with the theft. She told officers she had been at a party in Pintler's neighborhood and couldn't find a ride home.

Tuna Sales Up In America

LOS ANGELES AP--The American tuna industry is solving most of the problems that have plagued it in recent years.

Since World War II, it has had to face the competition of an ever-burgeoning Japanese industry.

For the last decade three Latin-American countries--Peru, Ecuador and Chile--have tried to restrict it, by extending their territorial limits 200 miles out to sea--over the world's richest tuna fishing grounds.

And two years ago, the deaths of two Detroit women after eating a can of tainted tuna sent a fright through the canning industry.

The industry has reinstated the tuna with a $10-million promotion program. Diplomacy overcame the 200-mile gambit. And this year, due to a curious mixture of economic factors, Japan is losing its grip in the American tuna market.

A steadying element in every crisis has been the well-developed American taste for tuna. Last year consumer demand approached an unprecedented one billion cans and sales so far this year indicate it may go even higher.

The Japanese have always been at a disadvantage in the American supermarket because a 45 per cent tariff on vegetable oil forces him to pack his product in brine.

Most Americans don't like saltwater tuna, so the Japanese turned to Western Europe where the oil tariff doesn't exist.

Suddenly tuna is a popular dish in Italy. Ten years ago Italians didn't import 10,000 tons. This year they will purchase over 50,000. Even in Japan, the consumer has evolved a taste for the fish in something other than its raw, dry state--as a smoked, highly spiced sausage--not yet available in America.

So where the Japanese accounted for 28 per cent of the tuna being processed in American canneries in the first quarter of 1964, in the same period this year, they will account for only 19 per cent.

The individual U. S. fisherman, however, feels he has been short changed.

He works aboard one of 143 vessels, most of them California based. In the winter his catch will be dropped along the West Coast at San Pedro or San Diego, Calif., or Astoria, Ore. In the summer months he may feed canneries in Maryland, Massachusetts or Maine.

But as long as foreign competition exists, he is forced to price the catch at world levels. In the early 1950s a ton of premium tuna drew $340; today it sells for $270.

"That's too low," says one San Pedro fisherman. "Meanwhile my cost of living has risen and I'm working just as hard."

WASHINGTON AP -- Kermit Gordon, director of the Bureau of the Budget since December 1962, is resigning about June 1 to become vice president of the Brookings Institution, a private research center.

He will be succeeded by Charles L. Schultze, who quit less than 10 weeks ago as assistant budget director and was told by President Johnson: "I hope that I may call on you for help in the future because we have much unfinished business to see to."

The shift was announced Tuesday by the White House. Schultze, 40, left the government Feb. 12 to resume his teaching career as a professor of economics at the University of Maryland.

The stratosphere begins at an altitude of six miles in regions near the poles, nine or more miles near the equator.

THE SCOTT COUNTY Courthouse, Benton, decoration to the downstair hallway, all inside steps, and rest rooms, as well as painting is near completion. The floor was covered with a two-inch hard surface, on which was placed a half-inch two-tone terrazzo flooring over the almost 200-foot hallway, steps and landing. Two new rest rooms on the first floor have been finished. A marble baseboard of imported grey Italian surrounds the flooring and landing. The project when completed will cost around $12,000 from funds set aside for this purpose. The county court expects further improvements of the building next year and following years in a planned program, without raising any taxes.

Appropriations Committee Turns Toward State Colleges

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Senate Appropriations Committee today turned its attention to state colleges.

Appearing first at the hearing was Dr. Ben L. Morton, executive secretary of the State Commission on Higher Education.

In a general statement applying to all of the five regional colleges, Morton stressed the need to bring the teacher-student ratio to one instructor for 20 students.

It is now much higher in most schools, he said.

The most pressing need of colleges and universities is an adequate number of teachers, he said. If necessary, other needs can wait, but he emphasized teacher salaries must be raised if schools are to meet mushrooming enrollment.

The commission recommended appropriation of $18.8 million in state funds to operate the five schools. An additional $1.9 million would come from college funds.

Morton said the commission recommended an increase from $100 to $200 tuition for out-of-state students attending Missouri colleges to help meet salary demands.

Projected enrollment for the coming school year at the five state colleges is 24,899--more than 3,000 above current attendance.

The first of the colleges to be heard by the committee was Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg.

Dr. Warren C. Lovinger, president, said his school expects 7,410 students to enroll this fall.

Lovinger requested more than $8 million to operate the school next year. But Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended only $5 million.

The House approved a figure only slightly higher than the governor's.

Lovinger also urged the committee to approve requests for two new classroom buildings on the Warrensburg campus.

The House authorized $2 million for a new science classroom building and $1.6 million for an education classroom facility. Additional federal funds probably would be available for these projects.

Chairman J.F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, remarked the committee might find it hard to justify many of the building projects requested.

Operating under a tight, one-year budget, he said, the Senate might be reluctant to tie up funds for facilities on which construction might not begin for two years.

John Lester Earns A Promotion

He is a graduate of Missouri University.

The Chamber of Commerce president is in correspondence with the Stryker-Kot-N - Wood Products Co., of Memphis in regard to the establishment of a branch factory in Sikeston. It is understood that the firm which manufactures roofing, building materials and a compressed wood-substitute out of cotton stalks and bolls intends to locate in this section.

The Kroger Stores Corporation has signed an optional lease of five years, the store building owned by C. L. Blanton, jr., which is being erected by Blanton and Shepherd on Malone avenue. The deal was consummated Friday, following the decision of the company to locate a second branch store in Sikeston.

According to John N. Chaney, the natatorium owned by him on Kingshighway, will be opened about May 1.

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 49
Reading time 5 Min.
Study time 5 Min.

You know how to say 'Puedo ir' (I can go). Now we will show you how to use the verb 'Poder' (To be able, can) in the past tense:

Present Tense

A) I can go B) Puedo ir. C) poo-AID-o/ear

A) He can go. B) El puede ir. C) l/poo-AID-day/ear

A) We can go B) Podemos ir. C) poe-DAY-mos/ear

A) They can go. B) Ellos pueden ir. C) A-yos/poo-AID-en/ear

Past Tense

A) I was able to go. B) Pude ir C)POO-day-ear

A) He was able to go. B) El pudo ir. C) l/POO-doe/ear

A) We were able to go. B) Pudimos ir C) poo-DEE-mos/ear

A) They were able to go. B) Ellos pudieron ir. C) A-yos/poo-dee-AIR-ron/ear.

It would be wise to use the definite past "keys" in the same manner that you learned the present tense "keys":

'Quiero', 'I want'
'Quise', 'I wanted'
Puedo, ' 'I can'
'Pude', 'I was able to, I could'

Never learn to conjugate your verb "keys" vertically. Always learn horizontally.

Conquer the first person singular before you go to the other persons.

CAUTION: If you do not follow this advice, you will become a 'mechanic' in the language; which means that you will search your mind for the tense and the person you want to use. Remember, 70% of all languages are spoken in the present tense; and that over half of that percentage is spoken in the first person singular. So--conquer the first person singular of the present tense before going on to other persons or tenses!

Hearnes Expresses Concern About Taxpayer Burdens

SALEM, Mo. AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Wednesday night "the taxpayer must not be burdened beyond the point where his economic health is really impaired."

He reviewed, before the Salem Chamber of Commerce, the duties of the legislature and the chief executive.

"The Missouri General Assembly and I, as governor of this state have a common responsibility," he said. "We must be concerned by all social needs. Roads must be built. The unemployed must be sustained while they are being retrained. . .

"In short, your legislators and your governor constantly face what I consider our most difficult task - that of reconciling unlimited demands with limited resources."

Six Emergencies

Six persons were treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital yesterday.

Jesse Scots, Sikeston, caught hand in roller; Colin Hawkins, Sikeston, spiked while playing baseball; Muriel Wingfield, Bell City, slammed car door on finger; Michael James, New Madrid, stepped on nail; Terry Shands, East Prairie, cut arm on tin; and Thomas Powers, East Prairie, fell off wagon.

Sikeston's New Post Office Ready

Sikeston's new $185,000 post office has been completed, and the move into the new building will take place over the weekend, according to Postmaster Pleas Malcolm.

The McDaniel Bros. Construction Company, Jonesboro, Ark., are the owners and builders of this modern air - conditioned building, and have leased it to the postal department.

The front of the building faces North street, and the west side faces the parking lot on North Kingshighway. The front of the building is set back to provide parking for ten vehicles, with additional street parking available.

The moving will begin Saturday with all city and rural services to be moved into the building, but all boxholders will continue to receive their mail in the old building until Monday morning.

The finance and management department will also be moved Saturday, as will all equipment.

There will be no close counters in the clerks department, as the lobby to the stamp counter, money order and parcel post counters, will be enclosed by glass doors, and remain open until service is closed at 4:30 p.m. The remaining part of the long lobby, for the boxholders and letter and package depository, will be open to the public at all hours.

All boxholders in the old building are asked to return all keys before the changeover takes place. They must account for all keys issued to them. The new box numbers are different from the old, and therefore few if any customers will receive the same number. All boxholders should check on this matter for any business reference used in the future.

Delivery service at the window will be on daylight saving time, while all incoming mail remains on standard time. The new time will cause some handicap in getting all class mail up and delivered by the time the windows open at 8:30 a.m.

Education And Health Bills Discussed By Committee

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Dr. George A. Ulett, director of Missouri's Mental Diseases Division, told the Senate Appropriations Committee today he is not surprised by public criticism, but resents it when it is directed at superintendents of state hospitals.

Tragic overcrowding, low salaries and poor working conditions at the state institutions are due to inadequate funds and facilities, not mismanagement, he said.

Ulett said asking superintendents to administer an effective mental health program under existing conditions is like hiring a carpenter to build without lumber, nails or tools.

But Missouri is now on the threshold of an effective treatment program.

"Just a few years ago," he said, "there was not much we could do for the mentally ill--just institutionalize and feed them.

"Today, medical science has given us new treatment methods."

He urged the committee to double the $237,500 recommended by the governor and approved by the House for research and training at the new Missouri Institute of Psychiatry in St. Louis.

Eventually, Missouri should spend $2 million a year on this part of the program since it would save money in terms of more rapid cure of the mentally ill, he said.

An immediate problem facing the division is the high turnover in employes, particularly among attendants, Dr. Ulett said. In some areas, the turnover is as high as 30 per cent.

He recommended salary increases to stabilize the work force.

Ulett also asked the committee to consider a $260,000 increase over the governor's recommendation of $685,000 for placing custodial patients in licensed nursing homes.

He said there are now more than 1,000 patients being cared for under this program at one third the cost of maintaining them in state institutions.

The total asked by the division, including funds for the seven hospitals, is about $46 million to operate the program the next fiscal year.

Wednesday night the committee completed hearings on educational needs.

Presidents of the five state colleges and Lincoln University met with the committee Wednesday to explain budget requests for the coming year.

A common plea was for more teachers, higher salaries and additional facilities to meet rapidly increasing enrollments.

Dr. Ben Morton, executive secretary of the state commission on higher education, stressed the need to bring the student-teacher ratio to one instructor for 20 students. The national average is 1-19.

Teacher salary levels also are too low to enable Missouri schools to compete with others in the Midwest, he said.

The House-approved funds for operating the six institutions fairly well in line with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' tight budget, but went even further in trimming proposed building projects.

Examining the budget requests of the State Division of Health Wednesday night, the committee was asked to put back $400,000 pared by the House.

The acting director, Dr. H. Hardwicke, said the money is needed to hire additional health inspectors, public nurses and supervisors.

He said there are 5,000 restaurants--mostly in rural Missouri--that are not being inspected for health standards because of inadequate personnel.

The problem is not so difficult in cities which have their own public health departments. Some state help is needed in smaller cities, but rarely is it necessary to inspect in St. Louis or Kansas City, he said.

Hiring additional public health nurses would pay the state dividends, Dr. Hardwicke said. It would permit home care and cut down on the costs of hospital and nursing home support.

Hearnes Expresses Concern About Taxpayer Burdens

SALEM, Mo. AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Wednesday night "the taxpayer must not be burdened beyond the point where his economic health is really impaired."

He reviewed, before the Salem Chamber of Commerce, the duties of the legislature and the chief executive.

"The Missouri General Assembly and I, as governor of this state have a common responsibility," he said. "We must be concerned by all social needs. Roads must be built. The unemployed must be sustained while they are being retrained. . .

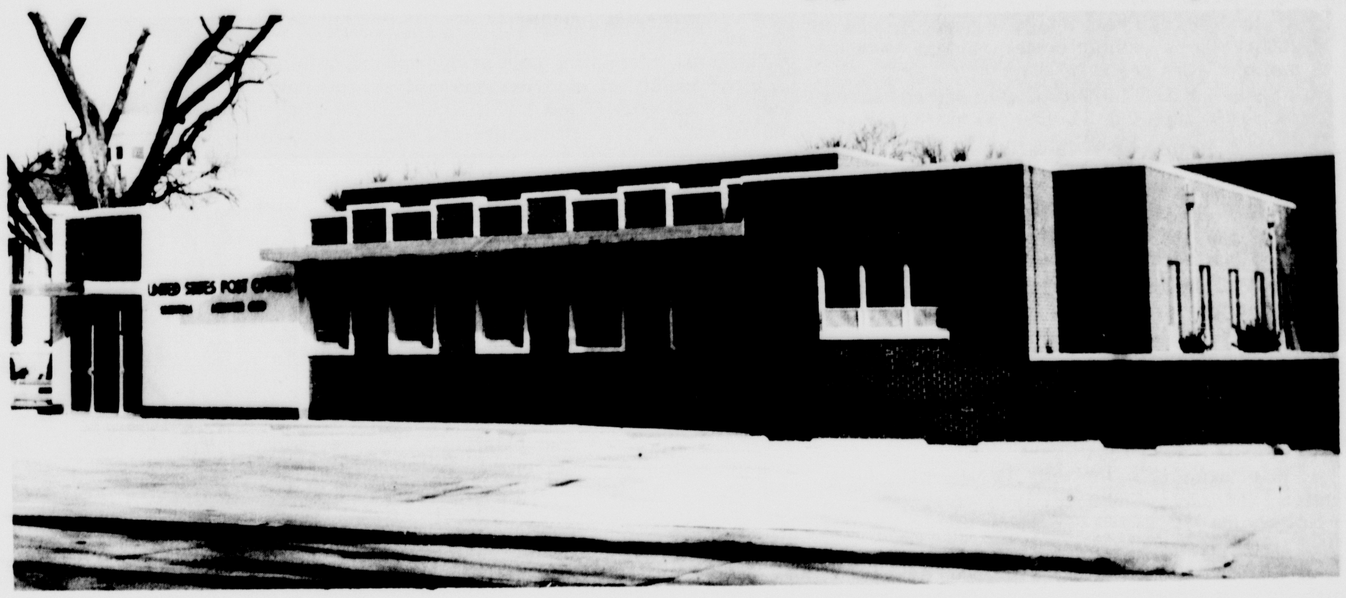
"In short, your legislators and your governor constantly face what I consider our most difficult task - that of reconciling unlimited demands with limited resources."

Six Emergencies

Six persons were treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital yesterday.

Jesse Scots, Sikeston, caught hand in roller; Colin Hawkins, Sikeston, spiked while playing baseball; Muriel Wingfield, Bell City, slammed car door on finger; Michael James, New Madrid, stepped on nail; Terry Shands, East Prairie, cut arm on tin; and Thomas Powers, East Prairie, fell off wagon.

Sikeston's New Post Office Ready



Sikeston's new $185,000 post office has been completed, and the move into the new building will take place over the weekend, according to Postmaster Pleas Malcolm.

The McDaniel Bros. Construction Company, Jonesboro, Ark., are the owners and builders of this modern air - conditioned building, and have leased it to the postal department.

The front of the building faces North street, and the west side faces the parking lot on North Kingshighway. The front of the building is set back to provide parking for ten vehicles, with additional street parking available.

The moving will begin Saturday with all city and rural services to be moved into the building, but all boxholders will continue to receive their mail in the old building until Monday morning.

The finance and management department will also be moved Saturday, as will all equipment.

There will be no close counters in the clerks department, as the lobby to the stamp counter, money order and parcel post counters, will be enclosed by glass doors, and remain open until service is closed at 4:30 p.m. The remaining part of the long lobby, for the boxholders and letter and package depository, will be open to the public at all hours.

All boxholders in the old building are asked to return all keys before the changeover takes place. They must account for all keys issued to them. The new box numbers are different from the old, and therefore few if any customers will receive the same number. All boxholders should check on this matter for any business reference used in the future.

Delivery service at the window will be on daylight saving time, while all incoming mail remains on standard time. The new time will cause some handicap in getting all class mail up and delivered by the time the windows open at 8:30 a.m.

Education And Health Bills Discussed By Committee

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Dr. George A. Ulett, director of Missouri's Mental Diseases Division, told the Senate Appropriations Committee today he is not surprised by public criticism, but resents it when it is directed at superintendents of state hospitals.

Tragic overcrowding, low salaries and poor working conditions at the state institutions are due to inadequate funds and facilities, not mismanagement, he said.

Ulett said asking superintendents to administer an effective mental health program under existing conditions is like hiring a carpenter to build without lumber, nails or tools.

But Missouri is now on the threshold of an effective treatment program.

"Just a few years ago," he said, "there was not much we could do for the mentally ill--just institutionalize and feed them.

"Today, medical science has given us new treatment methods."

He urged the committee to double the $237,500 recommended by the governor and approved by the House for research and training at the new Missouri Institute of Psychiatry in St. Louis.

Eventually, Missouri should spend $2 million a year on this part of the program since it would save money in terms of more rapid cure of the mentally ill, he said.

An immediate problem facing the division is the high turnover in employes, particularly among attendants, Dr. Ulett said. In some areas, the turnover is as high as 30 per cent.

He recommended salary increases to stabilize the work force.

Ulett also asked the committee to consider a $260,000 increase over the governor's recommendation of $685,000 for placing custodial patients in licensed nursing homes.

He said there are now more than 1,000 patients being cared for under this program at one third the cost of maintaining them in state institutions.

The total asked by the division, including funds for the seven hospitals, is about $46 million to operate the program the next fiscal year.

Wednesday night the committee completed hearings on educational needs.

Presidents of the five state colleges and Lincoln University met with the committee Wednesday to explain budget requests for the coming year.

A common plea was for more teachers, higher salaries and additional facilities to meet rapidly increasing enrollments.

Dr. Ben Morton, executive secretary of the state commission on higher education, stressed the need to bring the student-teacher ratio to one instructor for 20 students. The national average is 1-19.

Teacher salary levels also are too low to enable Missouri schools to compete with others in the Midwest, he said.

The House-approved funds for operating the six institutions fairly well in line with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' tight budget, but went even further in trimming proposed building projects.

Examining the budget requests of the State Division of Health Wednesday night, the committee was asked to put back $400,000 pared by the House.

The acting director, Dr. H. Hardwicke, said the money is needed to hire additional health inspectors, public nurses and supervisors.

He said there are 5,000 restaurants--mostly in rural Missouri--that are not being inspected for health standards because of inadequate personnel.

The problem is not so difficult in cities which have their own public health departments. Some state help is needed in smaller cities, but rarely is it necessary to inspect in St. Louis or Kansas City, he said.

Hiring additional public health nurses would pay the state dividends, Dr. Hardwicke said. It would permit home care and cut down on the costs of hospital and nursing home support.

Sixty - seven percent of the American public in 1965 believes that no citizen should be forced to belong to a union in order to hold his job. This is a record - high percentage of support for the Right to Work principle since nation - wide samplings were begun in 1944.

The so - called "union shop" requires that a person be compelled to belong to a union in order to hold his job. The Right to Work laws, now existing in 20 states, prohibit this compulsion.

The Opinion Research Corporation, Princeton, New Jersey, conducted a study of public opinion for the National Right to Work Committee. The following question was asked:

Which of these three arrangements do you favor for workers in industry?

A man can hold a job whether or not he belongs to a union 1956 - 48%; 1962 - 62%; 1964 - 67%.

A man can get a job if he doesn't already belong, but has to join after he is hired 1956 - 32%; 1962 - 31%; 1964 - 30%.

A man can get a job only if he belongs to a union 1956 - 6%; 1962 - 4%; 1964 - 2%.

No choice 1956 - 14%; 1962 - 3%; 1964 - 1%.

Data from the ORC study are based on a total of 1,025 personal interviews conducted across the country with respondents selected by scientific probability procedures. ORC declares that "the survey results are almost certainly within plus or minus 4% of the figures which would have been obtained if every adult in the survey area (U. S. A.) had been interviewed.

In its recap, ORC states: "Today, voluntary union membership enjoys majority support among all major population groups, except the unionized worker."

The research organization says its data show 28% of union manual workers in 1964 favor voluntary unionism as opposed to the compulsion of "union shop." Among manual workers (including non - union as well as union), 56% object to compulsory unionism and favor the Right to Work principle, according to results obtained in the survey.

S. D. Cadwallader, President of the National Right to Work Committee, and himself a railroad conductor of Cincinnati, said:

"These most recent facts developed from nation - wide studies show that the propaganda of the 'union shop' forces is not being swallowed by the American public. Increasing numbers of American citizens are becoming aware of the compulsion exercised by so - called 'union shop' contract, and the massive money power which this compulsion gives into the hands of the union hierarchy.

"The tens of millions of dollars being spent politically by the Meanys, the Reuthers, the Bridges and the other politically - minded union officials come largely from dues and fees raised with the instrument of compulsion -- the so-called 'union shop.' It is an infringement on the personal liberty of American citizens; and inherent in the use of this club of compulsion is the danger of Totalitarianism.

"Some of the union hierarchy are determined that every American citizen who works -- 78,000,000 today -- shall be forced to pay dues and belong to unions.

"The Right to Work movement is expanding. Additional states soon will be added to the growing list which safeguard a citizen's right to belong or not belong to a union."

Today, voluntary union membership enjoys majority support among all major population groups, except the unionized worker.

A tremendous affluence in American society will generate better taste and a consequent boom in home, factory, community and highway environments of beauty in every state in the Union. "There is a vast upsurge in the country for ugliness to be eliminated and beauty of the landscape substituted," says the American Association of Nurserymen. "Already this trend is in evidence -- in fact it gradually has been increasing in tempo for the past decade as indicated by demands for trees and shrubs to beautify the country. The year 1965 should break all records."

General buying income is expected to advance 50 per cent in the next ten years to $675 billions. Ten percent more families will be in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket. Better taste in living will prevail. No longer will most families be content with living in rundown neighborhoods where there is little or no emphasis on the landscape beauty and open space which everyone wants, especially as his income increases.

The most interesting part of this upward sweep is that beauty of environment will spread not only to more families but also to the working environment, the community and to highways, as visualized in the President's and Mrs. Johnson's programs, which add tremendous push to all drives for beauty.

How can the average citizen participate in this great surge for beauty and good taste in his surroundings?

First, he can survey his own property, either by himself, or by engaging a good nurseryman to advise him, after which he can lay plans for planting the property to make it beautiful. It doesn't have to be done all at once. If the landscaping is rundown or overgrown, he can renovate it. Or, if the planting is sparse, he can merely add to the beauty he already has.

Secondly, the operators of businesses and factories can survey their locations and then beautify them, in order to reap the benefits that come from trees and shrubs. Greater sales come to businesses in beautifully planted locations, as many suburban department stores and super markets especially have found out.

Factories find that beautiful landscaping and open space pays off in better workers, better public and community relations.

Third, communities need to take a good look at themselves. It is not only the large communities that sometimes are ugly. Many small communities need to plant and beautify so that visitors might exclaim, "I'd like to live here." Beauty pays. In beautified communities and neighborhoods real estate values are higher, business better. The small town of St. James, Mo., planted street trees and according to the local newspaper the people were given a "new spirit," new energies to make the community an even better place in which to live.

Fourth, highways and streets planted with lovely trees and shrubs will help to upgrade the community. Entrances to communities can be beautified. State and Federal highway departments are placing vast new emphasis on landscape beauty.

Every citizen, every business man and industrialist, every community and the state each can, by conducting their own individual surveys in relation to beauty, do a great deal to make America a better and more beautiful place to live, work and play. Beautification is everybody's job if "America the beautiful" really is to live up to its name, it is stated.

"The nation can only be beautiful if the public as well as business feels a responsibility toward and joins in the great task set forth," the association concludes.

Uterine cancer, which will take the lives of some 14,000 women this year, could be virtually eliminated as a cause of death if every woman had a "Pap" test each year, according to the American Cancer Society. This test should be included as part of an annual health checkup.

"Services to blind people are not confined to organizations specializing in this field. In every urban community non-specialized agencies assist blind persons as part of their total function," according to the introduction of the latest edition of the Directory of Agencies Serving Blind Persons in the United States. According to M. Robert Barnett, Executive Director of the American Foundation for the Blind, which published the book, the cooperation and help of several hundred agencies and organizations was obtained for this 13th edition of the only book of its kind.

"A MORE PERFECT UNION"

Back in our school days one of the first things we learned in history class was that this nation is a union of sovereign states. Not that we knew what "sovereign" meant, we probably didn't even wonder. But it sounded good -- sort of reassuring.

A union of sovereign states still sounds good. But in these latter days the states are losing much of their onetime proud dominion.

Just one example: the growing trend to by-pass the state governments entirely as the federal government steps up its programs dealing directly with municipalities and community organizations.

John Burkhart, an Indianapolis businessman, put the issue very clearly when he testified before a Senate subcommittee studying federal grants-in-aid.

"More and more federal grants are being made directly to local governments and community organizations," according to Mr. Burkhart, who urged that such grants be paid through state channels if the state so elects.

We agree with his logic. States should have a "direct, decisive and required role" in all federal programs which disburse taxpayers' funds within the state.

Legislation now before the Senate subcommittee would encourage a reversal of traditional federal-state relationships and would put local government in the primary role in dealing with the federal government.

With hundreds of federal aid programs pouring out billions annually, the taxpayers who provide these funds should demand that they be allocated in an orderly fashion. Channeling them through state governments should result in a more systematic and efficient system and at the same time help return some measure of sovereignty to the sovereign states. Until that happy day arrives when grants-in-aid can be eliminated, let's make them as efficient as possible.

NOT WORTH THE TROUBLE

It was a foggy morning, and the fishing smacks off Gloucester nosed their way out of the harbor. Suddenly a sailor in one craft hailed another:

"Hello, John, I have news for ye."

"What is it?"

"Wife had a baby, a boy."

"What'd he weigh?" the other voice called.

"Four pounds," came the reply, through the fog.

"Hell, you hardly got your bait back!"

GETTING TOGETHER

Freedom will be kept only so long as it is valued. And it will be valued only so long as it is understood.

Many Americans today think they still value freedom, but in practice they do not since they have ceased to understand it. They have a vague "feeling" that freedom is good, but they do not know why. So they are helpless against the clever propaganda and insidious proposals of freedom's enemies.

In renewing and enlarging an understanding of liberty, sound pro-freedom organizations and publications must play a vital part. We cannot all be students and specialists. We cannot all be writers and organizers. Those who are able to specialize in thinking and writing about Liberty, and who can form organizations in freedom's favor, have a service of the highest value to offer.

Every American who still has a "feeling" that freedom is good needs to learn more about pro-freedom groups and publications, or segments of them. If at all possible, he should read many of the publications regularly and join the best of the organizations.

Once our education is well underway, we should help to begin the education of others, so as to "multiply ourselves," and the strength which could save liberty, and pass on to others some of the knowledge of public affairs often so pathetically lacking.

Even the millions who do not know the names of their Congressmen, or of foreign countries which have become battlegrounds of the struggle against communism, can and must be reached.

Hal Boyle

Hal Boyle, 54, Associated Press human interest columnist for 21 years, is en route to his third assignment to a major armed conflict - Viet Nam.

Boyle, whose daily column appears in approximately 500 afternoon newspapers, was war correspondent for The Associated Press in Africa and Europe in World War II where his frontline stories of GIs in action won him a Pulitzer Prize in 1945.

In 1950 he volunteered for Associated Press duty in Korea, and reported on front-line activities during the heaviest fighting on that peninsula. There he won the Veterans of Foreign War's gold medal award for "outstanding contribution to national security." He also received the Overseas Press Club top award for best reporting in radio, television and newspapers.

Boyle's column was born under fire in Salerno, Italy, in 1943 and has been a continuous Associated Press feature since. Following the surrender of Japan he traveled around the world, writing stories from 65 countries.

Boyle's five-day-a-week column will be written from South Viet Nam during his assignment abroad.

In 1951, in presenting the VFW gold medal, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, then chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said of Boyle:

"I am pleased that this award goes to a friend I have known so long. He is the soldier's friend. I don't know anyone who knows fighting at the front so well, or anyone who has written so well about it."

Boyle, who has been dubbed "The Poor Man's Philosopher" and the "Pavement Plato," is a native of Kansas City, Mo., where he started his AP career in 1928 as a copy boy at 17. He was night city editor of the New York AP bureau in 1942 when he first went overseas.

NEW YORK (AP) — He was one of those quiet heroes for whom no bugles ever blow because we accept their daily bravery as a commonplace.

The cab drivers who picked him up every morning referred to him as "the bentover man." They called him that because he was bent over. Way over. Arthritis had frozen his spine in a permanent and painful arc.

But John L. McKee wasn't a bentover man at all when I first met him at the Missouri School of Journalism more than three decades ago. He was as straight and tall as a double yardstick. He was a fine all-around athlete, a medal-winning swimmer, and had a voice so promising that for a time he considered making singing his career.

Then something he could do nothing about went wrong with his strong young body. Nor could any of the medical specialists he consulted really help him much.

Arthritis seemed to grip his spine like a giant hand and slowly and progressively bent him over.

"Sometimes I think it is trying to turn me into a human pretzel," he once observed drily.

His swimming days were over. So were his hopes of becoming a professional singer. But John — or "Blackjack" as his pals came to know him — could bend over a typewriter.

And he bent over it with increasing skill. He wrote radio news for a time, then became a specialist in world business news, and won recognition as one of the best in the field.

People with an affliction have only two courses open to them. They either yield to self-pity and give up. Or they refuse to yield and make the best of a raw deal from fate.

"Blackjack" was a fighting Scot gifted with inexhaustible courage. If he ever felt sorry for himself, it was his own secret.

He had a wry and wonderful sense of humor and never lost it. His hobby was waging small wars with large corporations. He chuckled all day when he caught some huge public utility or banking firm in an error, and could point it out to their top brass in a pungent letter of mock dismay.

In 1950 "Blackjack" fell and broke some neck vertebrae.

"He can never work again," his doctors agreed.

But he stayed on the job for nearly 15 more years, although his head was not almost as moveless as his spine. His posture was so bad he could not look up or to the right or left. He recognized his friends by their shoes.

Once he told me: "I can always tell you — you're too cheap to get a shine."

In bad weather or good, he made it to his desk. The rough cabbies in his neighborhood had a protective attitude toward him. They'd pass by a fuming fat lady or an important-looking executive anytime to pick up "that bent over fellow with the cane."

Early this year "Blackjack" suffered a stroke. After a brain operation, his stubborn heart beat on for three months in its paralyzed frame and then stopped. Knowing the end was near, he had asked before entering the hospital that his body go to science. That was like him, too.

A cabdriver asked me the other day, "Say, whatever happened to your friend, the bentover man?" When I told him, he was silent for a moment and then said:

"Well, he sure was a grand guy. I never knew anybody that showed more real guts."

When people talk like that about you after you're gone, you don't need a memorial. You've made a success out of life.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Despite the authentic-sounding story carried by two New York Herald Tribune columnists on how President Johnson happened to appoint Jerry Wadsworth to the Federal Communications Commission, here is the real story of what happened:

LBJ was conferring with ex-Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, whom he once defeated for Vice President. During the course of the conversation over Viet Nam, the President complained that he couldn't get good Republicans to take jobs with his Administration. He said he had been looking for a well qualified Republican to become Federal Communications Commissioner, wanted someone who could stand up against the networks, would campaign for less crime on the airwaves, more wholesome children's programs and more education.

Lodge, a Republican who used to be U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, immediately told the President that he knew an excellent man to fill the FCC post. He named his former associate, Jerry Wadsworth, who succeeded him as U. S. Ambassador to the U.N.

President Johnson picked up the telephone immediately, called Wadsworth, offered him the job. Wadsworth accepted.

Note — The networks aren't happy about Wadsworth's appointment. They figure he will give them a bad time. This is because he is probably even better than Johnson realizes. He has had the courage of his convictions in many tight spots, worked during the closing days of the Eisenhower Administration for better understanding with the Russians, always claimed that the future peace of the world depended upon better understanding between these two powerful nations.

—TWO GREAT MEN—

Two men died last weekend, diverse in their backgrounds but similar in their goals. They illustrate what makes America.

One, Gardner Jackson, the son of a railroad magnate, gave away a fortune to help other people. The other, Sen. Olin Johnston, began life as a South Carolina textile worker and never forgot his humble beginnings.

I first met Sen. Johnston at breakfast in the Governor's Mansion in Columbia, S. C., in 1937. It was the biggest breakfast I ever ate -- until I had breakfast with Khrushchev some years later. It included hominy grits, bacon, ham and eggs, fried apples, corn bread, gravy, fruit, coffee, and milk. Gov. Jonnston, in his slow, South Carolina drawl, told me that he was permitting Negroes to register in the Democratic party at 10 cents a head — a revolutionary move in South Carolina at that time.

Later, when Olin came to the Senate, he reversed his liberal start in permitting Negro participation in South Carolina politics but he never reversed his determination to help the working people from which he sprang. While other Southern Senators were lining up with reactionary Republicans against minimum wages, public power, antipoverty legislation, Olin never wavered. Many times the conservatives in his state tried to change or defeat him. They failed.

—SON OF THE RICH—

I first met Gardner Jackson in 1928, on the observation platform of a Santa Fe railroad train leaving Los Angeles for the East. I had come west just after Herbert Hoover was elected, to try to go on his goodwill trip to Latin America. I then represented La Nacion of Buenos Aires and El Mundo of Havana. Hoover had decreed that no Latin American correspondent could go on the battleship with him and I suspected the ruling was aimed chiefly at me since I was not in his good graces.

In a last ditch effort to get aboard, I hired a motor boat and went out to the gangplank of the U.S.S. Maryland and started to climb aboard. I was thrown off. I went back to the Western Union office and filed a thousand words to Buenos Aires telling how La Nacion's correspondent was kicked off the Hoover "goodwill" battleship.

This may have influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere in Buenos Aires when Mr. Hoover arrived later. It definitely influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere on the Santa Fe observation platform as I took the train back to Washington. There however, I met Gardner Jackson, one of the most engaging battlers for humanity I have ever known.

Gardner got off the train in Arizona to help the cause of the Navajo Indians, later moved to Washington to help all sorts of causes, ranging from tenant farmers, the bonus marchers, the Spanish Loyalists in their battle against Dictator Franco. In fact, there wasn't a tough cause he didn't champion, beginning with Sacco and Vanzetti, two socialist Italians accused of the famous payroll robbery in Dedham, Mass.

Gardner lost many of the causes. Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the Spanish Loyalists lost their war. He was thrown out of the Agriculture Department for being too vociferous in going to bat for the sharecroppers.

But Gardner never lost his enthusiasm, never lost his determination to help his fellowmen. In the course of helping them, he gave away practically all of the family fortune which his father, the founder of the Denver-Rio Grande Railroad, had left.

Gardner Jackson is gone. And as he died, some of the causes which he championed, and were considered lost, proved not lost after all.

Though Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the rules of criminal procedure which convicted them have been revamped so that others in their predicament would not be executed today. The Spanish Loyalists lost, but the freedoms which they championed have gradually come back to modern Spain. Long ago the veterans who marched on Washington got their bonus. And just as Gardner Jackson died, the migrant farm workers for whom he fought such a seemingly hopeless battle won a great victory with the exclusion of foreign wetbacks.

Those were two men who died last week, one poor, the other originally wealthy, who in their different ways pushed forward the progress of America.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

New Revolutionary 'Labor Party' Leader Plans To Set Up "Self Defense Units"

NEW YORK — Money — lots of it — appeared to be the least of the problems of the "Revolutionary Marxist - Leninist" movement launched here Sunday at the Progressive Labor Party (PLP).

From somewhere came ample funds to keep 110 delegates at the founding convention here for a week at the rate of almost $2,000 a day in expenses.

From somewhere came funds for the printing and distributing of tens of thousands of leaflets, booklets and a 48-page convention discussion document in New York and Washington, D.C., over the April 17 weekend.

And whatever the mysterious sources are, they're also providing thousands of dollars monthly for maintenance of a network of headquarters. The PLP people claim headquarters in Berkeley, San Francisco, Chicago, Buffalo, Louisville, Ky., and Williamsport, Pa. These, in addition to three major offices here in New York.

Apparently there is no doubt of the gold flow. PLP leaders are planning to publish not only a Marxist-Leninist quarterly, a national newspaper, and a series of anti-imperialist booklets, but also a slick magazine fashioned after the pro-Chinese Communist "Revolution" now issued in Paris for the European continent.

Thus there is no reason to doubt that the avowedly Communist Progressive Labor Party — pro-Maoist and pro-Castro — will find the money for its action program.

And those of us seeking clues to the direct action planned by this tough coalition of young people find the specifics in the militant, disdainful program advocated by the PLP's most powerful leader.

He's the 32-year-old William Epton, arrested last August on charges of advocating criminal anarchy. His arrest came after the Harlem riots. His aggressive eight-point action program should be a signal to white and Negro communities alike.

The tenor of his words, the implications of his call to action can be measured by his feeling that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King is too moderate to be followed by the Negro people.

Epton, a vice president of the new party calls for the launching of "self defense units" to protect the organizations and activities he outlines from "attacks by the ruling class and their representative arm — the police and other para-military units."

Epton demands the revival of something not encountered inside labor for decades. He urges the creation of trade union caucuses or organizations within the trade union movement that would "represent the interests of the black workers and guarantee them (the interests)."

He calls for tenant, house, and block committees to struggle in low income areas.

In the image of the depression day militancy, he urges organization of unemployment councils to demand jobs and bring the unemployed together.

He wants "political councils" set up to "take effective control of their communities."

He demands immediate establishing of "farm - worker organizations of sharecroppers and tenant farmers" so they could "demand agrarian reform and land to the landless."

Then Epton wants all these units to "come together into a nationwide coalition" in an "all-black liberation front led by the black working class."

Wherever Epton spoke of his action program he was cheered by the PLP people. There can be no doubt of the organization's efforts to concentrate on farm and factory labor.

Two of Epton's fellow vice presidents were not identified but were described as former steelworkers from Buffalo. There are units on the waterfront and on the rails. These are made up of young people. The Party is made up of young people.

In days of old they would have made up the youth movement of the American Communist Party. But now the Moscow-line Communists are older and disinclined to go in for the direct action which they describe as "infantile leftism."

By actual count, there are some 1,500 known activists in the founding party. But, in the words of one of the government's highest security officials, they are "dedicated to stirring wildcat action in the factories and on the streets. They are a very successful and militant band of young revolutionists and have had ample money since the first day they went into business as the Progressive Labor Movement back in 1962.

"They don't just pass resolutions, They're zealously working for a revolution.

"They won't make it, of course, but the trouble they make will give this country real difficulty."

Sixty - seven percent of the American public in 1965 believes that no citizen should be forced to belong to a union in order to hold his job. This is a record - high percentage of support for the Right to Work principle since nation - wide samplings were begun in 1944.

The so - called "union shop" requires that a person be compelled to belong to a union in order to hold his job. The Right to Work laws, now existing in 20 states, prohibit this compulsion.

The Opinion Research Corporation, Princeton, New Jersey, conducted a study of public opinion for the National Right to Work Committee. The following question was asked:

Which of these three arrangements do you favor for workers in industry?

A man can hold a job whether or not he belongs to a union 1956 - 48%; 1962 - 62%; 1964 - 67%.

A man can get a job if he doesn't already belong, but has to join after he is hired 1956 - 32%; 1962 - 31%; 1964 - 30%.

No choice 1956 - 14%; 1962 - 3%; 1964 - 1%.

Data from the ORC study are based on a total of 1,025 personal interviews conducted across the country with respondents selected by scientific probability procedures. ORC declares that "the survey results are almost certainly within plus or minus 4% of the figures which would have been obtained if every adult in the survey area (U. S. A.) had been interviewed.

In its recap, ORC states: "Today, voluntary union membership enjoys majority support among all major population groups, except the unionized worker."

The research organization says its data show 28% of union manual workers in 1964 favor voluntary unionism as opposed to the compulsion of "union shop." Among manual workers (including non - union as well as union), 56% object to compulsory unionism and favor the Right to Work principle, according to results obtained in the survey.

"Already this trend is in evidence -- in fact it gradually has been increasing in tempo for the past decade as indicated by demands for trees and shrubs to beautify the country. The year 1965 should break all records."

General buying income is expected to advance 50 per cent in the next ten years to $675 billions. Ten percent more families will be in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket. Better taste in living will prevail. No longer will most families be content with living in rundown neighborhoods where there is little or no emphasis on the landscape beauty and open space which everyone wants, especially as his income increases.

The most interesting part of this upward sweep is that beauty of environment will spread not only to more families but also to the working environment, the community and to highways, as visualized in the President's and Mrs. Johnson's programs, which add tremendous push to all drives for beauty.

How can the average citizen participate in this great surge for beauty and good taste in his surroundings?

First, he can survey his own property, either by himself, or by engaging a good nurseryman to advise him, after which he can lay plans for planting the property to make it beautiful. It doesn't have to be done all at once. If the landscaping is rundown or overgrown, he can renovate it. Or, if the planting is sparse, he can merely add to the beauty he already has.

Secondly, the operators of businesses and factories can survey their locations and then beautify them, in order to reap the benefits that come from trees and shrubs. Greater sales come to businesses in beautifully planted locations, as many suburban department stores and super markets especially have found out.

Factories find that beautiful landscaping and open space pays off in better workers, better public and community relations.

Third, communities need to take a good look at themselves. It is not only the large communities that sometimes are ugly. Many small communities need to plant and beautify so that visitors might exclaim, "I'd like to live here." Beauty pays. In beautified communities and neighborhoods real estate values are higher, business better. The small town of St. James, Mo., planted street trees and according to the local newspaper the people were given a "new spirit," new energies to make the community an even better place in which to live.

Fourth, highways and streets planted with lovely trees and shrubs will help to upgrade the community. Entrances to communities can be beautified. State and Federal highway departments are placing vast new emphasis on landscape beauty.

Every citizen, every business man and industrialist, every community and the state each can, by conducting their own individual surveys in relation to beauty, do a great deal to make America a better and more beautiful place to live, work and play. Beautification is everybody's job if "America the beautiful" really is to live up to its name, it is stated.

"The nation can only be beautiful if the public as well as business feels a responsibility toward and joins in the great task set forth," the association concludes.

"Services to blind people are not confined to organizations specializing in this field. In every urban community non-specialized agencies assist blind persons as part of their total function," according to the introduction of the latest edition of the Directory of Agencies Serving Blind Persons in the United States. According to M. Robert Barnett, Executive Director of the American Foundation for the Blind, which published the book, the cooperation and help of several hundred agencies and organizations was obtained for this 13th edition of the only book of its kind.

Hal Boyle

Hal Boyle, 54, Associated Press human interest columnist for 21 years, is en route to his third assignment to a major armed conflict - Viet Nam.

Boyle, whose daily column appears in approximately 500 afternoon newspapers, was war correspondent for The Associated Press in Africa and Europe in World War II where his frontline stories of GIs in action won him a Pulitzer Prize in 1945.

In 1950 he volunteered for Associated Press duty in Korea, and reported on front-line activities during the heaviest fighting on that peninsula. There he won the Veterans of Foreign War's gold medal award for "outstanding contribution to national security." He also received the Overseas Press Club top award for best reporting in radio, television and newspapers.

Boyle's column was born under fire in Salerno, Italy, in 1943 and has been a continuous Associated Press feature since. Following the surrender of Japan he traveled around the world, writing stories from 65 countries.

Boyle's five-day-a-week column will be written from South Viet Nam during his assignment abroad.

In 1951, in presenting the VFW gold medal, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, then chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said of Boyle:

"I am pleased that this award goes to a friend I have known so long. He is the soldier's friend. I don't know anyone who knows fighting at the front so well, or anyone who has written so well about it."

Boyle, who has been dubbed "The Poor Man's Philosopher" and the "Pavement Plato," is a native of Kansas City, Mo., where he started his AP career in 1928 as a copy boy at 17. He was night city editor of the New York AP bureau in 1942 when he first went overseas.

NEW YORK (AP) — He was one of those quiet heroes for whom no bugles ever blow because we accept their daily bravery as a commonplace.

The cab drivers who picked him up every morning referred to him as "the bentover man." They called him that because he was bent over. Way over. Arthritis had frozen his spine in a permanent and painful arc.

But John L. McKee wasn't a bentover man at all when I first met him at the Missouri School of Journalism more than three decades ago. He was as straight and tall as a double yardstick. He was a fine all-around athlete, a medal-winning swimmer, and had a voice so promising that for a time he considered making singing his career.

Then something he could do nothing about went wrong with his strong young body. Nor could any of the medical specialists he consulted really help him much.

Arthritis seemed to grip his spine like a giant hand and slowly and progressively bent him over.

"Sometimes I think it is trying to turn me into a human pretzel," he once observed drily.

His swimming days were over. So were his hopes of becoming a professional singer. But John — or "Blackjack" as his pals came to know him — could bend over a typewriter.

And he bent over it with increasing skill. He wrote radio news for a time, then became a specialist in world business news, and won recognition as one of the best in the field.

People with an affliction have only two courses open to them. They either yield to self-pity and give up. Or they refuse to yield and make the best of a raw deal from fate.

"Blackjack" was a fighting Scot gifted with inexhaustible courage. If he ever felt sorry for himself, it was his own secret.

He had a wry and wonderful sense of humor and never lost it. His hobby was waging small wars with large corporations. He chuckled all day when he caught some huge public utility or banking firm in an error, and could point it out to their top brass in a pungent letter of mock dismay.

In 1950 "Blackjack" fell and broke some neck vertebrae.

"He can never work again," his doctors agreed.

But he stayed on the job for nearly 15 more years, although his head was not almost as moveless as his spine. His posture was so bad he could not look up or to the right or left. He recognized his friends by their shoes.

Once he told me: "I can always tell you — you're too cheap to get a shine."

In bad weather or good, he made it to his desk. The rough cabbies in his neighborhood had a protective attitude toward him. They'd pass by a fuming fat lady or an important-looking executive anytime to pick up "that bent over fellow with the cane."

Early this year "Blackjack" suffered a stroke. After a brain operation, his stubborn heart beat on for three months in its paralyzed frame and then stopped. Knowing the end was near, he had asked before entering the hospital that his body go to science. That was like him, too.

A cabdriver asked me the other day, "Say, whatever happened to your friend, the bentover man?" When I told him, he was silent for a moment and then said:

"Well, he sure was a grand guy. I never knew anybody that showed more real guts."

When people talk like that about you after you're gone, you don't need a memorial. You've made a success out of life.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Despite the authentic-sounding story carried by two New York Herald Tribune columnists on how President Johnson happened to appoint Jerry Wadsworth to the Federal Communications Commission, here is the real story of what happened:

LBJ was conferring with ex-Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, whom he once defeated for Vice President. During the course of the conversation over Viet Nam, the President complained that he couldn't get good Republicans to take jobs with his Administration. He said he had been looking for a well qualified Republican to become Federal Communications Commissioner, wanted someone who could stand up against the networks, would campaign for less crime on the airwaves, more wholesome children's programs and more education.

Lodge, a Republican who used to be U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, immediately told the President that he knew an excellent man to fill the FCC post. He named his former associate, Jerry Wadsworth, who succeeded him as U. S. Ambassador to the U.N.

President Johnson picked up the telephone immediately, called Wadsworth, offered him the job. Wadsworth accepted.

Note — The networks aren't happy about Wadsworth's appointment. They figure he will give them a bad time. This is because he is probably even better than Johnson realizes. He has had the courage of his convictions in many tight spots, worked during the closing days of the Eisenhower Administration for better understanding with the Russians, always claimed that the future peace of the world depended upon better understanding between these two powerful nations.

—TWO GREAT MEN—

Two men died last weekend, diverse in their backgrounds but similar in their goals. They illustrate what makes America.

One, Gardner Jackson, the son of a railroad magnate, gave away a fortune to help other people. The other, Sen. Olin Johnston, began life as a South Carolina textile worker and never forgot his humble beginnings.

I first met Sen. Johnston at breakfast in the Governor's Mansion in Columbia, S. C., in 1937. It was the biggest breakfast I ever ate -- until I had breakfast with Khrushchev some years later. It included hominy grits, bacon, ham and eggs, fried apples, corn bread, gravy, fruit, coffee, and milk. Gov. Jonnston, in his slow, South Carolina drawl, told me that he was permitting Negroes to register in the Democratic party at 10 cents a head — a revolutionary move in South Carolina at that time.

Later, when Olin came to the Senate, he reversed his liberal start in permitting Negro participation in South Carolina politics but he never reversed his determination to help the working people from which he sprang. While other Southern Senators were lining up with reactionary Republicans against minimum wages, public power, antipoverty legislation, Olin never wavered. Many times the conservatives in his state tried to change or defeat him. They failed.

—SON OF THE RICH—

I first met Gardner Jackson in 1928, on the observation platform of a Santa Fe railroad train leaving Los Angeles for the East. I had come west just after Herbert Hoover was elected, to try to go on his goodwill trip to Latin America. I then represented La Nacion of Buenos Aires and El Mundo of Havana. Hoover had decreed that no Latin American correspondent could go on the battleship with him and I suspected the ruling was aimed chiefly at me since I was not in his good graces.

In a last ditch effort to get aboard, I hired a motor boat and went out to the gangplank of the U.S.S. Maryland and started to climb aboard. I was thrown off. I went back to the Western Union office and filed a thousand words to Buenos Aires telling how La Nacion's correspondent was kicked off the Hoover "goodwill" battleship.

This may have influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere in Buenos Aires when Mr. Hoover arrived later. It definitely influenced the fact that there was a depressed atmosphere on the Santa Fe observation platform as I took the train back to Washington. There however, I met Gardner Jackson, one of the most engaging battlers for humanity I have ever known.

Gardner got off the train in Arizona to help the cause of the Navajo Indians, later moved to Washington to help all sorts of causes, ranging from tenant farmers, the bonus marchers, the Spanish Loyalists in their battle against Dictator Franco. In fact, there wasn't a tough cause he didn't champion, beginning with Sacco and Vanzetti, two socialist Italians accused of the famous payroll robbery in Dedham, Mass.

Gardner lost many of the causes. Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the Spanish Loyalists lost their war. He was thrown out of the Agriculture Department for being too vociferous in going to bat for the sharecroppers.

But Gardner never lost his enthusiasm, never lost his determination to help his fellowmen. In the course of helping them, he gave away practically all of the family fortune which his father, the founder of the Denver-Rio Grande Railroad, had left.

Gardner Jackson is gone. And as he died, some of the causes which he championed, and were considered lost, proved not lost after all.

Though Sacco and Vanzetti were executed, the rules of criminal procedure which convicted them have been revamped so that others in their predicament would not be executed today. The Spanish Loyalists lost, but the freedoms which they championed have gradually come back to modern Spain. Long ago the veterans who marched on Washington got their bonus. And just as Gardner Jackson died, the migrant farm workers for whom he fought such a seemingly hopeless battle won a great victory with the exclusion of foreign wetbacks.

Those were two men who died last week, one poor, the other originally wealthy, who in their different ways pushed forward the progress of America.

"A MORE PERFECT UNION"

Back in our school days one of the first things we learned in history class was that this nation is a union of sovereign states. Not that we knew what "sovereign" meant; we probably didn't even wonder. But it sounded good -- sort of reassuring.

A union of sovereign states still sounds good. But in these latter days the states are losing much of their onetime proud dominion.

Just one example: the growing trend to by-pass the state governments entirely as the federal government steps up its programs dealing directly with municipalities and community organizations.

John Burkhart, an Indianapolis businessman, put the issue very clearly when he testified before a Senate subcommittee studying federal grants-in-aid.

"More and more federal grants are being made directly to local governments and community organizations," according to Mr. Burkhart, who urged that such grants be paid through state channels if the state so elects.

We agree with his logic. States should have a "direct, decisive and required role" in all federal programs which disburse taxpayers' funds within the state.

Legislation now before the Senate subcommittee would encourage a reversal of traditional federal-state relationships and would put local government in the primary role in dealing with the federal government.

With hundreds of federal aid programs pouring out billions annually, the taxpayers who provide these funds should demand that they be allocated in an orderly fashion. Channeling them through state governments should result in a more systematic and efficient system and at the same time help return some measure of sovereignty to the sovereign states. Until that happy day arrives when grants-in-aid can be eliminated, let's make them as efficient as possible.

NOT WORTH THE TROUBLE

It was a foggy morning, and the fishing smacks off Gloucester nosed their way out of the harbor. Suddenly a sailor in one craft hailed another:

"Hello, John, I have news for ye."

"What is it?"

"Wife had a baby, a boy."

"What'd he weigh?" the other voice called.

"Four pounds," came the reply, through the fog.

"Hell, you hardly got your bait back!"

GETTING TOGETHER

Freedom will be kept only so long as it is valued. And it will be valued only so long as it is understood.

Many Americans today think they still value freedom, but in practice they do not since they have ceased to understand it. They have a vague "feeling" that freedom is good, but they do not know why. So they are helpless against the clever propaganda and insidious proposals of freedom's enemies.

In renewing and enlarging an understanding of liberty, sound pro-freedom organizations and publications must play a vital part. We cannot all be students and specialists. We cannot all be writers and organizers. Those who are able to specialize in thinking and writing about Liberty, and who can form organizations in freedon's favor, have a service of the highest value to offer.

Every American who still has a "feeling" that freedom is good needs to learn more about pro-freedom groups and publications, or segments of them. If at all possible, he should read many of the publications regularly and join the best of the organizations.

Once our education is well underway, we should help to begin the education of others, so as to "multiply ourselves," and the strength which could save liberty, and pass on to others some of the knowledge of public affairs often so pathetically lacking.

Even the millions who do not know the names of their Congressmen, or of foreign countries which have become battlegrounds of the struggle against communism, can and must be reached.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

New Revolutionary 'Labor Party' Leader Plans To Set Up "Self Defense Units"

NEW YORK — Money — lots of it — appeared to be the least of the problems of the "Revolutionary Marxist - Leninist" movement launched here Sunday at the Progressive Labor Party (PLP).

From somewhere came ample funds to keep 110 delegates at the founding convention here for a week at the rate of almost $2,000 a day in expenses.

From somewhere came funds for the printing and distributing of tens of thousands of leaflets, booklets and a 48-page convention discussion document in New York and Washington, D.C., over the April 17 weekend.

And whatever the mysterious sources are, they're also providing thousands of dollars monthly for maintenance of a network of headquarters. The PLP people claim headquarters in Berkeley, San Francisco, Chicago, Buffalo, Louisville, Ky., and Williamsport, Pa. These, in addition to three major offices here in New York.

Apparently there is no doubt of the gold flow. PLP leaders are planning to publish not only a Marxist-Leninist quarterly, a national newspaper, and a series of anti-imperialist booklets, but also a slick magazine fashioned after the pro-Chinese Communist "Revolution" now issued in Paris for the European continent.

Thus there is no reason to doubt that the avowedly Communist Progressive Labor Party — pro-Maoist and pro-Castro — will find the money for its action program.

And those of us seeking clues to the direct action planned by this tough coalition of young people find the specifics in the militant, disdainful program advocated by the PLP's most powerful leader.

He's the 32-year-old William Epton, arrested last August on Charges of advocating criminal anarchy. His arrest came after the Harlem riots. His aggressive eight-point action program should be a signal to white and Negro communities alike.

The tenor of his words, the implications of his call to action can be measured by his feeling that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King is too moderate to be followed by the Negro people.

Epton, a vice president of the new party calls for the launching of "self defense units" to protect the organizations and activities he outlines from "attacks by the ruling class and their representative arm — the police and other para-military units."

Epton demands the revival of something not encountered inside labor for decades. He urges the creation of trade union caucuses or organizations within the trade union movement that would "represent the interests of the black workers and guarantee them (the interests)."

He calls for tenant, house, and block committees to struggle in low income areas.

In the image of the depression day militancy, he urges organization of unemployment councils to demand jobs and bring the unemployed together.

He wants "political councils" set up to "take effective control of their communities."

He demands immediate establishing of "farm - worker organizations of sharecroppers and tenant farmers" so they could "demand agrarian reform and land to the landless."

Then Epton wants all these units to "come together into a nationwide coalition" in an "all-black liberation front led by the black working class."

Wherever Epton spoke of his action program he was cheered by the PLP people. There can be no doubt of the organization's efforts to concentrate on farm and factory labor.

Two of Epton's fellow vice presidents were not identified but were described as former steelworkers from Buffalo. There are units on the waterfront and on the rails. These are made up of young people. The Party is made up of young people.

In days of old they would have made up the youth movement of the American Communist Party. But now the Moscow-line Communists are older and disinclined to go in for the direct action which they describe as "infantile leftism."

By actual count, there are some 1,500 known activists in the founding party. But, in the words of one of the government's highest security officials, they are "dedicated to stirring wildcat action in the factories and on the streets. They are a very successful and militant band of young revolutionists and have had ample money since the first day they went into business as the Progressive Labor Movement back in 1962.

"They don't just pass resolutions, They're zealously working for a revolution.

"They won't make it, of course, but the trouble they make will give this country real difficulty."

William Hacker

William Hacker To Conduct Symphony

William Penny Hacker who will conduct the Virginia Symphony on April 26, has had a career which could be described as fabulous quite truthfully. Mr. Hacker was just sixteen years old and a student under the magnificent Jose Iturbi when Mr. Iturbi offered him his first opportunity to conduct a symphony orchestra. Appearing before the Orquestra Iturbi de Mexico, his success was immediate and assured. A leading Mexican music critic, Kahan, announced in his column, "He is a Master Director, born and not made, musical to the marrow of his bones." Something of that must have been evident to the audience of 10,000 people who heard him make his conducting debut at the Central Park Naumburg Symphony Concerts last summer.

Between these two performances Mr. Hacker has filled many concert engagements both as pianist and conductor. He is a "cum laude" graduate of the Eastman School of music, and went from there to the University of Arkansas to join the music faculty. While there he organized the Arkansas State Symphony, the excellence of which won him the title of "Arkansas Traveller" from the Governor, and a special account which was read into the Congressional Record by Senator William J. Fulbright. After Presenting a highly successful series of concerts as Piano soloist the demand for concert appearance came in such a flood that Mr. Hacker found it necessary to give up his University post and since then has played approximately one hundred piano recitals a season in addition to making many appearances as guest conductor with various orchestras.

Meadow Lane Garden Club Meets With Mrs. Williams As Hostess

Meadow Lane Garden Club's April meeting was held in the home of Mrs. Ralph Williams. Present were 13 members and one guest, Mrs. William C. Critchlow for a luncheon and completion of the annual therapy projects of Easter baskets and refreshments for the Sikeston nursing homes and Sikeston public school special education pupils.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Ruth Lee, president. Routine reports were heard and accepted. Special committee reports were Mrs. M. H. Davis, Flower Show Chairman who announced committee appointments for the Fall Flower Show to be held October 9-10; Mrs. Leo Schade, Garden Center and National Council Books Chairman, reported club contribution of a book to the Sikeston Public Library; and Mrs. Eldon Ziegenhorn, Ways and Means Chairman, presented Flower Books of Instructions on arranging to be available for sale.

Mrs. Lee and four members made plans for attending the State Garden Club Convention in St. Louis May 12-14. She announced that Mrs. M. H. Davis had accepted an invitation as guest flower arranger to present a program to New Madrid County Extension Service in April.

In conclusion attention was focused on a display arrangement made by Mrs. M. H. Davis for club study. Being of Oriental design, composed of materials available from any home such as kitchen cutting board, tin food can, bottle corks, appropriate figurine from low cost stores and a flowering branch and spray paint, there emerged what could easily be a blue ribbon arrangement.

Meeting adjourned with members being urged to attend May meeting which will be in the home of Mrs. Lennie Whitworth, 12 Green Meadows, and will be the final meeting before adjourning for the summer.

THE HANDS OF CHRIST

BROWN with Galilean weather,
Beautiful with Heaven's grace
Were the hands that blessed the children
As they looked upon His face.

Like the petals of the lillies
Were His fingers that were felt
Gently on the blind man's eyelids
As in wayside gloom he knelt.

Hands of brotherly compassion
Long ago the hungry fed,
Give me drink from His heart's fountain,
Break for me the living bread.

Lakers Top Celts

LOS ANGELES AP--"Its anybody's playoff now," said a jubilant Fred Schaus after his Los Angeles Lakers romped to a 126-105 victory over the Boston Celtics Wednesday night in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We have a good chance to win Friday night and then it's just a best-of-3 series," Schaus continued. The victory cut Boston's lead to 2-1, and the Lakers will enjoy the home court advantage again Friday.

If the series goes seven games, two of the final three will be played in Boston, but Schaus said, "We knew from the beginning we had to win in Boston anyway. We feel we have momentum going for us now."

The Lakers' Jerry West, continuing his better than 40-point per game average in the playoffs, hit for 43. LeRoy Ellis contributed 29, and Gene Wiley grabbed 28 rebounds and made several fine defensive plays to go with his 11 points.

Celtic Coarch Red Auerbach was not overly concerned about his team's decisive defeat.

"We were expecting a letdown in the second game, but instead it came in the third," Auerbach said. "I knew in the first three minutes that we were off form, and nothing went right."

Sam Jones continued his fine offensive play for Boston, getting 35 points.

PEDI-CURE

Whose foot is small is blessed beyond compare,
For round-toed shoes today are something rare;
We fashion - minded ladies have to wear
The kind that pinch our toes.

From far abroad, our fashions came to be,
And it's not very hard for us to see,
Why all the gals go barefoot in Paree;
They mean to curb their woes.

But if our thoroughfare down Main were trod,
With tootsies bare, and footsies all unshod,
We would be dubbed some kind of crazy clod. . . .
To leave off half our clothes.

So we will all stay chic, and in the know,
We'll follow suit, as shoe styles come and go,
And maybe wind up having just one toe. . .
In years to come . . . who knows? — J. Pat Babin

St. Louis Wins Over Milwaukee

Manager Red Schoendienst called on his bench Wednesday night and Tito Francona and Phil Gagliano answered with ringing bats that produced a 6-3 St. Louis victory over Milwaukee in St. Louis.

The red haired freckled Schoendienst a "little concerned" about the Cards' snail-like start that had produced only one victory in six games, benched Mike Shannon and Julian Javier.

Kansas City was shut out 1-0 by the Tigers in Detroit.

Everything fell into place for the Cardinals as Bill White hit his first home run in the first inning with none on and Lou Brock hammered his second with one on to kick off a four-run fifth inning.

Bob Purkey won his first game with the Cardinals, giving up only Eddie Mathews' solo homer in the fourth and one other hit before the Braves touched him for four singles and two runs in the ninth.

But it was Francona, acquired from Cleveland during the winter, and Gagliano, who spent most of last season in the minor leagues, who supplied the spark.

They combined for the Cardinals second run in the second when Francona's line drive got by Lee Maye for a triple and Gagliano hit a sacrifice fly.

Francona singled in the big fifth and Gagliano drove a pitch deep to center field for another sacrifice fly..

"Gagliano will stay in there against lefthanded and right-handed pitchers." Schoendienst said. "I'll platoon Francona. But I can't take those two out now."

In fact, the bench looked so good to Schoendienst, that he considered giving ailing Ken Boyer a rest. The third baseman has a sore side.

"If the day off tomorrow, Thursday, doesn't help, I'll probably use Ed Spiezio," Schoendienst said. "If a player can't give 100 per cent physically, he's best on the bench until he's healthy."

The Cardinals open a week-long road trip Friday in Cincinnati.

Don Demeter's two-out run-scoring double in the fourth inning beat Kansas City. Hank Aguirre and Larry Sherry combined to make the run stand up with Aguirre getting the victory.

John O'Donoghue allowed only three hits in 6 1-3 innings, but took his first loss after one victory. Bert Campaneris supplied most of the Kansas City attack with three hits, two of them doubles and Doc Edwards got two hits.

The A's also have an open date today.

THE HANDS OF CHRIST

BROWN with Galilean weather,
Beautiful with Heaven's grace
Were the hands that blessed the children
As they looked upon His face.

Like the petals of the lilies
Were His fingers that were felt
Gently on the blind man's eyelids
As in wayside gloom he knelt.

Hands of brotherly compassion
Long ago the hungry fed,
Give me drink from His heart's fountain,
Break for me the living bread.

Lakers Top Celts

LOS ANGELES AP--"Its anybody's playoff now," said a jubilant Fred Schaus after his Los Angeles Lakers romped to a 126-105 victory over the Boston Celtics Wednesday night in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We have a good chance to win Friday night and then it's just a best-of-3 series," Schaus continued. The victory cut Boston's lead to 2-1, and the Lakers will enjoy the home court advantage again Friday.

If the series goes seven games, two of the final three will be played in Boston, but Schaus said, "We knew from the beginning we had to win in Boston anyway. We feel we have momentum going for us now."

The Lakers' Jerry West, continuing his better than 40-point per game average in the playoffs, hit for 43. LeRoy Ellis contributed 29, and Gene Wiley grabbed 28 rebounds and made several fine defensive plays to go with his 11 points.

Celtic Coarch Red Auerbach was not overly concerned about his team's decisive defeat.

"We were expecting a letdown in the second game, but instead it came in the third," Auerbach said. "I knew in the first three minutes that we were off form, and nothing went right."

Sam Jones continued his fine offensive play for Boston, getting 35 points.

Chevrolet. It's a bigger, more beautiful car this year. Which is why that handsome silhouette could be mistaken for cars costing a thousand—even two thousand—dollars more.

Chevelle. This one's got lively looks, spirited power, a softer ride—and a remarkable amount of room atop a highly maneuverable wheelbase. No wonder it's today's favorite mid-size car.

Chevy II. No car so trim looking has a right to be so thrifty. But thrifty it is, with brakes that adjust themselves, a long-lived exhaust system, and lots of other money savers.

Special Berlin Report From World War II Records

BERLIN AP -- Twenty years ago a Russian army of 2 1/2 million was fighting its last battle, with 41,000 pieces and 6,250 tanks.

The Battle of Berlin began April 16, 1945 with the German capital less than 50 miles away. It took the Russians two weeks to reach the city and obtain its surrender.

The brunt of the attack in the center of a line about 100 miles long was borne by the Soviet Army's 1st Byelorussian Front under Marshal Gregori K. Zhukov.

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky led the drive of his 2nd Byelorussian Front in the north. The southern flank was the responsibility of the Isa Ukranian Front commanded by Marshal Ivan Konev.

The armies had been dug in at the Oder and Neisse rivers for two months, regrouping and gathering strength.

Konev's forces quickly broke out of the bridgehead.

Zhukov was not so fortunate. Facing the bulk of the Nazi forces gathered for defense of Berlin, his forces took about two days to smash their way out of the Kuestrin bridgehead.

While Zhukov's troops were fighting slowly straight toward Berlin, Konev swung two tank armies to the northwest.

The Germans had thrown in their last reserves, old men of 60 and young boys of 16 fought alongside battle - hardened Wehrmacht and SS troops.

But the Russian streamroller was moving and the Nazis retreated, died or surrendered.

By nightfall or April 24, the Zhukov and Konev armies had closed the ring around the city.

Inside Berlin, about 200,000 German troops had taken position. Men, women and children were driven furiously to build roadblocks and gun positions. The city had been largely destroyed by five years of Allied air attacks.

On April 25, Soviet Infantrymen were swarming through the periphery and then set off to advance along a broad front along the Teltow Canal toward city center.

In his bunker behind the Reich Chancellory, Adolf Hitler directed his last stand.

His last appearance above ground probably was April 28 when he decorated a group of Hitler Youths while Russian shells were screaming overhead.

Commandos of the SS roamed parts of the city not yet captured and shot or hanged German soldiers who had deserted.

In an effort to prevent Soviet patrols from penetrating the center of Berlin through the subway, SS troopers flooded the tunnels. Thousands of women and children sheltering there were drowned.

On April 30, Hitler shot himself. His wife of a few days and mistress of many years, Eva Braun, swallowed cyanide.

$2,000,00 Pepsi-Cola Bottlers' shopping spree promotion to offer over 150,000 prizes starting April 19.

$2,000,000 ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN TO HERALD EVENT

The nation will be going on a Shopping Spree again starting April 19 -- to the tune of $2,000,000 with Pepsi - Cola Company and its bottlers picking up the check.

More than 150,000 prizes will be distributed, and a $2,000,000 advertising program will herald the promotion across the country, according to Sidney M. Maran, promotion manager for the company. Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, Inc. is the national advertising agency.

The 1965 Shopping Spree will be bigger than last year's event. It will be, by far, the most expansive promotion ever conducted by Pepsi-Cola Company, and quite possibly, the biggest ever run in any industry.

It will make another giant promotional step forward by hard-selling, promotionally - minded Donald M. Kendall took over the company's presidency 18 months ago.

NATIONAL GRAND PRIZE IS HOUSEFUL OF GROCERIES. .. AND A HOUSE!

Highlight of the 1965 promotion will be the National Grand Prize -- a houseful of groceries . . . and the house.

To get the groceries the National Grand Prize winner and his family will be set loose in a Shopping Spree in the food store of their choice for a full thirty minutes. They will shop absolutely free and keep all the groceries they gather, with Pepsi-Cola Company paying the full retail cost of all food items collected on the check-out tape.

The house will be a Johns-Manville ranch-stule home with kitchen appliances and lot, valued at $40,000.

A total of 731 national prizes will be awarded, including ten Oldsmobile station wagons, plus a year's supply of automotive equipment and services; ten 15-minute shopping sprees for ten entire families; and 710 merchandise gift certificates ranging in value from $1,000 to $100.

The national Shopping Spree theme will be carried through at local level. Pepsi - Cola bottlers will award 20, three minute shopping sprees plus 1400 cases of Pepsi - Cola products in food stores chosen by winners and in each case, pick up the full retail check.

In addition, bottlers will also award a series of prizes during each of six week's duration of the promotion. These prizes will include merchandise certificates redeemable at local participating outlets, plus free Pepsi-Cola Company products.

EXTENSIVE $2,000,000 ADVERTISING EFFORT AT LOCAL, NATIONAL LEVELS

$2,000,000 will be spent by Pepsi - Cola Company and its bottlers to advertise the 1965 promotion.

Approximately 9,000,000 lines of print advertising are slated in newspapers as primary medium at the local level. It is estimated that some 750 daily newspapers will carry 1965 Shopping Spree advertising schedules.

Additionally, local level planning includes scheduling of 40,000 radio and 20,000 television spot announcements, the placement of more than 6,000 30 and 3-sheet postings and the use of 100,000,000 pieces of point-of-sale material in retail outlets across the country.

At the national level, Pepsi-Cola Company will unlimber its heavy consumer advertising guns in support of this promotion starting April 10, when the first of seven, four - color full-page insertions will appear in Progressive Farmers, to be followed by similar insertions in Ebony, Look, Saturday Evening Post and Life. TV Guide and Reader's Digest will carry full-color spreads.

The company will kick off a series of eight national television spots, over all three networks, starting April 18 on the ABC-TV Sunday Night Movie Show.

Additionally, twelve, two - color spread insertions will run in major influential trade publications.

EACH ENTRY QUALIFIES FOR NATIONAL & LOCAL PRIZES: NO LIMIT TO ENTRIES.

According to company officials one entry can qualify for both local and national drawings. Free entry blanks will be available at Pepsi-Cola outlets in individual franchise areas. Entrants simply complete the entry blanks as directed and return to the local bottler at a designated address. There is no limit to the number of entries an individual may submit each week.

In certain states, because of local laws, a special contest has been developed to parallel the over-all National Shopping Spree Promotion.

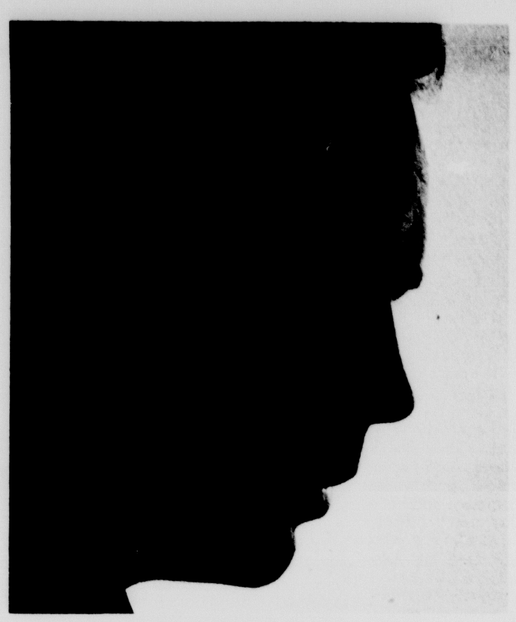
Good telephone service is essential to today's modern businesses and institutions. That's why Roy Beck, Cape Girardeau communications engineer, devotes full time to



MEETING THE CUSTOMER'S NEEDS

ASK CAPE GIRARDEAU'S ROY BECK how he assesses his job, and you'll get an answer like this.

"It's a real challenge. You're dealing with the customer's day-to-day problems and generally you're able to recommend communications that will help solve these problems."

Beck and others like him throughout the company spend a lot of time and thought each day making recommendations "that actually will help." That's his job – communications engineer.

It's Beck's responsibility to help business customers with their often complex communications needs. To do this, he must be something of a Sherlock Holmes. He must learn all he can about the businesses and institutions he serves to determine their communications requirements accurately. When he learns what needs exist, he must make sound recommendations.

Many of Beck's customers are right in Cape Girardeau. Others are scattered throughout almost 50 towns in southeast Missouri.

Beck contacts customers in two ways. Often, a businessman will request a particular type of service. It's Beck's job to find out if the service requested will fill the bill or whether he should suggest some alternative. In other cases, Beck originates the contact by suggesting ways in which a customer can benefit by use of additional communications facilities. In both cases, the job calls for a thorough knowledge of available services and their practical application.

Obviously, Beck's job involves more than merely preparing a sales order memo and tossing it on the desk of a service order writer. For example, his work brings him into frequent contact with other departments. He consults often with engineering department people to determine what equipment will be needed to provide the service a customer wants. Traffic comes into the picture in many ways, including "busy line studies" to determine if calls are getting through to a businessman. If callers are getting frequent busy signals, Beck uses this as persuasive evidence for improved service. After proper equipment has been selected, it's the plant department's turn to take center stage with an efficient and timely installation job.

Throughout the complicated sequence which transforms an abstract communications need into the reality of telephone equipment and service, Beck serves as liaison between the customer and various departments within the company. But his responsibility doesn't end there. He also makes sure the new service is performing to the customer's expectations, meeting his needs.

Beck keeps his appointments calendar up to date. He'd be lost without it.

"I try to spend as much time as possible actually visiting my customers," says Beck. But of course personal visits are only part of the job. There's work to be done in the office, too. Occasionally there are letters to be written. Appointments must be made. Accurate records must be maintained. Also, there are telephone contacts with customers which Beck must handle personally.

When he talks on the telephone, Beck is careful to give his customers time to explain their problems fully. He checks his records frequently during conversations. There are plenty of records to check. There's an IBM "printout" of the customer's present equipment called a PBX or Key System Record. Often there's a Busy Line Report based on a traffic department study. Beck also keeps a record of each contact, providing a handy history of a customer's service. And there are other records and references. It's a job which calls for a keen sense of order. Beck masters the paper work, it doesn't master him.

Previous experience has proved helpful to Beck in his present job. After graduating from high school in Sikeston, his home town, Beck felt he needed more education and spent a year at a business college in Kentucky. Returning to Sikeston, Beck worked several years with an electric cooperative before joining the telephone company in 1959. He worked as a business representative in Sikeston until moving to his present job in 1963.

Living all his life in southeast Missouri undoubtedly contributes to Beck's effectiveness as a communications engineer. He believes wholeheartedly in the future of the area. "Things are beginning to happen," he says. "And there are a lot of good people here."

Yes, Roy Beck has a real stake in southeast Missouri. This is where he married his wife, Beverly. This is where his two daughters were born.

As Beck leaves the telephone building after work, he can look east down the easy slope of Broadway and see the Mississippi. Cape was a bustling river town during its early days. Then the steamboats left and the town went into a quiet slumber. Today it's changing. Population is on the upswing. New businesses are moving into the area. They bring their communications problems with them. Roy Beck will be the man to help them find the solutions.

When a customer asks a question, Beck must either know the answer or know where to find it quickly.

Beauty Routine Tones Skin

Combat wrinkles and aging dryness with nightly facial massages. Select a moisturizing cream. Apply lightly. Work with the forefingers in an upward circular movement. Start (left) with the chewing muscles. Work firmly on the forehead (center) and don't neglect under the chin (right). Finish by placing hands separately on the throat, fingers spread and work with firm downward motion. (DuBarry)

This is the time when a woman's skin reflects the full impact of fluctuating seasonal temperatures. The day-to-day cliff-hanger weather proves especially irritating to dry or mature skin.

Just run your hands over your upper arms and elbows. Do they pass the touch test? Take a good look at your face and neck in strong light. Do they have a parched look? If they do, they need daily care.

Each night cleanse your face thoroughly with a cream cleanser and skin freshener. Apply a hypo-allergenic moisturizing cream. The mature woman needs one that contains natural oils normally found in healthy young skins.

by Helen Hennessy
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

How you apply such a cream is as important to your skin health as the cream itself.

A beautician (for DuBarry) suggests this nightly routine before you go to bed:

- Apply the moisturizing cream sparingly with two fingers. Massage the chewing muscles using upward circular motions.
- Use forefingers to massage laugh lines. Start from bottom of chin and massage upward.
- Continue to massage around the nostrils, on the bridge of the nose and gently around the eyes.
- The forehead calls for firm circular massaging.
- Finish your facial massage by placing your hands separately on your throat with fingers spread widely apart. Massage in a firm downward movement.

These massage exercises, when done properly, contribute to over-all skin health and muscle tone.

the rest and the Senate is expected to follow suit since the governor recommended it. Most state agencies having anything to do with the outdoors support it and the federal government is encouraging wide-scale development with attractive matching funds.

The Park Board also has a list of scores of other improvements it would like to make but can't because the earnings won't stretch to cover all of them.

To project the big picture on outdoor recreation the board estimated the total cost at more than $3.5 million over the next two years.

Earnings being what they are, the governor suggested $352,130 to finance cabin repair, camp ground development and lake work next year.

The House trimmed this slightly.

Fine suggested the Senate delete a section calling for $820,000 to build swimming pools, boat harbors and cabin facilities at some parks.

This money would come out of the board's building fund which is financed by revenue bonds.

Earlier Tuesday the committee heard testimony from Dr. Elmer Ellis, president of the University of Missouri, and chancellors from the four campuses in the university system.

Ellis urged the Senate to restore funds cut by the House. He asked for an additional $3 million in operating costs and selected capital improvements trimmed or omitted in either the governor's budget or the House bill.

Much of the operating increase is needed to bring teacher salaries to a competitive level with other Midwestern universities, Ellis said.

He said the university -- including the Rolla, St. Louis and Kansas City branches -- needs at least $62 million to operate during the next year.

Some $43 million would come from the state. The rest would come from federal grants, donations and other sources.

Ellis also warned the committee Missouri is slipping further behind in its building program. He suggested that if the state cannot step up its building program through normal appropriations every consideration should be given to financing the facilities through a state bond issue.

A proposed constitutional change is pending in a House committee to permit the state to issue up to $150 million in bonds for a state building program.

PURCHASING

85. Recommendation:

That the Purchasing Agent shall prepare and enforce uniform specifications for office equipment in state offices. These specifications shall enable offices to exchange furniture and commonly used equipment without inconveniencing work procedures.

Current practices allow departmental supervisors decision authority in types and kinds of office equipment purchased. Absence of equipment uniformity resulting from this practice limit interchanging equipment and furniture among offices; and blanket contracts for purchasing commonly used equipment and furniture are difficult to prepare.

Offices now purchase steel filing cabinets of different sizes; however, a standard size in terms of drawer capacity could be generally acceptable. A greater cost variation arises from offices requesting specific finishes for matching the colors of other office furniture. These individual office specifications have caused the prices paid for five-drawer filing cabinets to range from $69.80 to $85.35 and the prices for four-drawer cabinets--a smaller cabinet--to range from $89.60 to $276.97 during a two-month period. Attention is directed to the prison industries' price list for four-drawer filing cabinets during that same period--a four-drawer filing cabinet with a lock was priced at $65.00.

Adopting uniform specifications for office furniture will permit prison industries to purchase machinery for manufacturing equipment and furniture needed by the state. Experience indicates prison industries' prices tend to be lower on comparable items. Uniform office equipment will enable idle equipment to be transferred to underfurnished offices with minimum inconvenience. Uniform office equipment specifications will allow the Purchasing Agent to consolidate agencies' equipment needs, and negotiate more favorable blanket purchasing contracts on an annual basis.

Uniform office equipment and furniture specifications can save the state a considerable amount of money.

86. Recommendation;

That the Purchasing Agent shall prepare and distribute regularly a list of useful surplus property; and that such property shall be described to enable agencies and institutions to calculate restoration or repair costs if such equipment were acquired.

An essential part of a program to distribute useful surplus property includes notifying all agencies about the equipment available. Agencies, branch offices, and institutions outside Jefferson City may have difficulty finding what surplus property is available, and what costs might be expected to repair surplus property.

The 1965 Commission can again cite filing cabinets as an example. At least thirty metal four-drawer filing cabinets were observed in the state's surplus property section during the summer and fall of 1964. Some of these cabinets needed only paint; some needed minor repairs--all painting and repairing could have been done inexpensively by prison industries.

Agencies and institutions should be informed of these opportunities to obtain useful surplus property. Redistribution of useful surplus equipment could save a considerable amount of money now spent for new equipment.

87. Recommendation:

That the capabilities and policies of the prison industries be made known to all state agencies and institutions; and that after allowing six months for the dissemination of such information, the Attorney General shall invoke the penalty provisions against all violators of Sections 216.510 and 216.515, RSMo 1959.

A part of Missouri's purchasing legislation deals with the role of the prison industries in producing finished goods and supplies used by state agencies and institutions. Chapter 216, Sections 216.475 to 216.520, RSMo 1959, may be summarized into the following provisions:

(1) All institutions and agencies are required to furnish the director of prison industries with an estimate of their demands for his products during the coming year--estimates are to be in the director's hands by May 1 each year.

(2) An Industrial Advisory Board appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, is to counsel with the director of prison industries; and decisions are to be reached concerning what institutional agency demands for products shall be filled by prison industries.

(3) The director of prison industries is to use such decisions as directions to enter into contracts for raw materials sufficient to supply state institutions and agencies with required products as planned.

(4) The director of prison industries is to prepare a descriptive list of all available products by July 1 each year. The list shall be distributed to all institutions and agencies.

(5) The statutes prescribe strict penalties for all persons subject to these laws, who fail to abide by their provisions. Violators of the statutes are subject to fines ranging from $50 to $100 or imprisonment for a period from three months to one year. Institutional purchasers may avoid buying prison industry products upon certification by the director of prison industries that such products are not available within reasonable time limits.

(To Be Continued)

Missourians Rough It Says Mr. Fine

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missourians like to rough it but want all the comforts of home, State Park Director Lee Fine told the Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday night.

Fine said there is a real hungar for outdoor recreation as evidenced by the more than nine million persons who visited the state parks last year.

It is a sophisticated hunger, however.

Campers are no longer satisfied with a pup tent, sleeping bag, hand axe and fishing pole. They come in plush camp trailers now, some equipped with television sets.

Many prefer electricy to the campfire and the late, late show to contemplating under the stars.

They want convenient sanitation facilities, tap water and telephone nearby.

Not all outdoormen have succumbed to such comforts, of course, but many of the casual campers demand them, Fine said.

Providing these utilities in the 33 existing state parks and in the three new ones being developed is the big task faced by the Park Board.

Installing modern rest rooms and sewage facilities to meet Division of Health standards throughout the system would cost the state close to $1 million.

A third of this amount already has been approved by the legislature in an emergency measure to get improvements underway for this summer's camping clientele.

The House already has okayed

Missourians Rough It Says Mr. Fine

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missourians like to rough it but want all the comforts of home, State Park Director Lee Fine told the Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday night.

Fine said there is a real hunger for outdoor recreation as evidenced by the more than nine million persons who visited the state parks last year.

It is a sophisticated hunger, however.

Campers are no longer satisfied with a pup tent, sleeping bag, hand axe and fishing pole. They come in plush camp trailers now, some equipped with television sets.

Many prefer electricy to the campfire and the late, late show to contemplating under the stars.

They want convenient sanitation facilities, tap water and telephone nearby.

Not all outdoormen have succumbed to such comforts, of course, but many of the casual campers demand them, Fine said.

Providing these utilities in the 33 existing state parks and in the three new ones being developed is the big task faced by the Park Board.

Installing modern rest rooms and sewage facilities to meet Division of Health standards throughout the system would cost the state close to $1 million.

A third of this amount already has been approved by the legislature in an emergency measure to get improvements underway for this summer's camping clientele.

The House already has okayed

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing a copy of a letter I recently received from my brother, Rikki, who has been in the Merchant Marines since 1940. This letter I thought might be of interest to you and your readers, inasmuch, as it has to do with our battles in South Vietnam.

Briefly, my brother is a Purser with the Pacific Far East Lines, Inc. His seniority allows him to choose his ships and occasionally he chooses the sleek new cargo ships and was aboard the California Bear at the time this letter was written. It brings home to us, at least to me, our real reason for being in South Vietnam. These are facts that come from one "who was there."

His opinions of MacArthur and Truman are his own, and his having been through the Korean War and World War II he obviously has his own reasons for those expressions of opinion.

If you feel that this is of interest you have my permission to reprint it.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Joe,

This trip has taken me to Japan (Yokohama & Kobe), Korea (Pusan & Inchon), Formosa (Keelung and Takao) and now to Saigon, where we arrived today and will spend the next five days. After we leave here we go to Bangkok, the one place I've never been, but always wanted to see. After Bangkok, back to Japan (Moji, Nagoya, Kobe, Yokohama) then home about the middle of May.

Saigon is a large city about five hours up the Mekong River from the sea. The Mekong is a deep but narrow river that winds and turns and writhes through the most desolate jungled swampland in the world. Only once in miles do you see a rice paddy or a cleared patch of ground perhaps two acres big under cultivation. The rest of the time it is just a monotony of dwarfed jungle bush and black mud. The ground is perfectly flat for as far as the horizon on both sides of the river, bordered on the east by a range of mountains; bordered on the west by the horizon . . . that swamp is infested with the Viet Cong. Completely encircling Saigon, the Viet Cong is a force that is almost felt rather than ever seen. Everyone knows they are there; everyone knows they are in Saigon 'oo, but who knows who is on which side? They are all of the same nationality, so who do you shoot? They can seal the river and block the port any time they choose to do so, for all it would take is one mine planted at a hair-pin turn in the river and a ship would block all traffic. They just don't want to block the river yet, for they feel that it is not yet the time to do so . . . It is said that half the supplies we bring here get to the Viet Cong anyway so they don't want to cut off their own source of supplies. . . Occasionally, a concentration of them are discovered, or they have a meeting somewhere and our Intelligence gets wind of it and then we can hit them. Seldom can we hit with force, for they just fade into the terrain, but now and then we do flush them out . . .

This morning at 7:30 we were only about thirty miles up the river from the sea when we heard the first explosion . . . We went out on deck and became ring-siders at a real air show! One after another of our dive bombers came circling in over an area between four and five miles from us, apparently where they had found a large enough concentration of Viet Cong and Viet Cong supplies to hit them. We watched for over two hours, until we were too far up river to see anything more, while the planes came in, circled, peeled off one at a time and made their bombing dive on the place. We watched the bombs fall, the explosion rise from the ground and mushroom into the sky and five seconds later heard the roar of the bombs. Once, at least, we are certain they hit an ammunition dump because there was one hell of a big secondary explosion.

It was quite a show and there were over fifty of our dive bombers in the act, so it was an important strike. Perhaps tomorrow the Saigon papers will tell us what it was all about. Anyway, it was a first hand look at a little war that so many Americans can't accept as the real thing. Those were real planes, real bombs and real people getting blown to hell over there in that swampland. . . This part of the Oriental world is struggling for its very existence against the Communist world that has swallowed up one little country after another . .. and could have been stopped by MacArthur at the time Truman fired him. This is a continuation of Korea in a different land and by a different means. . . No more army against army, but neighbor against neighbor; Vietnamese against his brother. Look at a hundred stevedores on the docks of Saigon and try to guess which one is capable of planting a bomb on the ship. . . Look at any group in a restaurant here and try to guess which are Viet Cong . . . Yet those are the people who are waging a war that is intended to add another little country to the communist octapus. Lose this place to the Communists and we lose Asia, for the rest will go quickly if Uncle Sam cannot be depended upon to save even this one little country. Losa Asia and the Philippines and then goes Africa and then South America and the world is a place no longer fit for our children to inherit from us. This little country here, which is such a desolate and poor place and so seemingly unimportant to the welfare of America is a keypoint in the future of the world and therefore to the future of America. We have laid it on the line here and this time we can't back down. . . We can't have another such debacle as that of Korea when Mac Arthur could have settled the Communist question for the next fifty years by kicking hell out of China at a time when we could have done it cheaply, but Truman thought he could solve it by his own bluster and blow!

Saturday Fine Arts Banquet Nearing Sellout

Robert E. Bliss who will be honored guest and featured speaker at the Fine Arts Festival Banquet on Saturday evening at 6:30 is a native Missourian who has received much from his native state in the education and inspiration to achieve the heights in a musical career. Now his life is dedicated to passing on to other young people that which he has received.

Mr. Bliss attended elementary and high schools in Kansas City where he started his study of the piano at the age of seven. At twelve he added the organ to his interests. Studying and advancing he soon assumed the post of assistant organist in his home church. At around the same time he commenced the study of the voice with the late Mrs. Russell Rizer of Kansas City and later with Mr. Whit Hall of Washington, D. C. He has his Bachelor of Arts degree in Music from the University of Kansas City (now a part of the University of Missouri) and has done much graduate study there in addition to taking advanced work with such notable artist-teachers as Mr. Fred Dufflemeyer on the piano, Dr. William Lemmonds whose time is in great demand as a teacher of organ, and vocalist Mr. Hardin van Deursen. Mr. Bliss has filled the position of organist-choirmaster in many of Kansas City's leading churches in addition to his teaching committments at the University of Missouri, and he is now serving at the Zion United Church of Christ at St. Joseph, Missouri.

Mr. Bliss holds an honorary membership in the American Choral Conductors' Guild, and is a member of the American Guild of Organists, Missouri Music Educators Association, Music Educators' National Conference, and the Missouri State Teachers' Association. He has served his country in the U. S. Marine Reserve and the U. S. Air Force for a total of eight years.

Mr. Bliss has devoted much of his time to work in Music Therapy at the Missouri State Hospital Number 2 at St. Joseph, to public school teaching in both vocal and instrumental music and the Allied Arts. He is frequently called upon to present workshops and clinics or lectures in church music, to judge high school musical events, conduct choir festivals, and as an oratorio and cantata soloist.

The appearance of Mr. Bliss at the Fine Arts Festival Banquet is the result of the fine support given to the burgeoning Arts Festival by the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce. Everyone who is interested in any facet of the fine arts should be present to share with his fellows in an excitingly different experience. Every event connected with the Festival this year, as was the case at the innaugural Festival a year ago, is an outpouring of the joy which those who work and play in the area of the arts wish to share with the entire community of Southeast Missouri as well as any travellers who may come for a sample or stay for the whole feast. Admission charges are limited to the vanishing point but due to the many hours of voluntary service by members of all organizations involved the results promise to be quite professional.

One of the notable contributions by a local group will be the decor for the banquet which is being provided by the Meadow Lane Garden Club (inadvertantly omitted in earlier notices). Mrs. Ruth Lee is president of the club and many of the members are busily engaged and working with the members of Rose Gate Club to turn the banquet hall into a veritable bower. Many Sikestonians have reason to feel that with all the floral arrangements provided by the Meadow Lane and Rose Gate Clubs the deocrations alone will be worth attending these events to see.

Attendance is limited to 250 for the banquet although the other events will be able to accommodate a much larger number. Tickets priced at a ridiculously low $2.00 are going fast, but you can still find a few at one of the three Sikeston Banks or by calling or seeing the presidents of the participating groups; or banquet committee members as follows: Mrs. Tom Childester, Mrs. Earl Jarvis, Mr. Tony Statler, Richard Smith, Harold Jones, Mr. Sam Harbin, Miss Jane Wilkerson, or Mrs. Ruth Lee.

An additional attraction and one worthy of special note will be the music to be provided by Miss Linda Wilson, Camdenton, harpist, a most attractive and talented young lady.

Whatever happened to the old-fashioned gal who used to blush?

Dry Ice Helps Planes Get Through Fog

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A commercial airline says there is a way to get through the winter fogs which tie up many airports.

For this you need a small plane with a hole in it and some ground-up dry ice.

When fog stops the airliners, up goes the small plane. Once over the airport, the pilot begins shoving the dry-ice pellets through a hole in the side or bottom of the plane.

United Air Lines says that more than 80 per cent of the time a corridor opens in the fog, big enough to allow liners to land and take off. Sometimes the corridor lasts all day.

It took nearly 20 years to convince United Air Lines officials.

Last winter United tried it 74 times at 6 airports and it worked 60 times. Some 5,500 passengers got through, including 2,000 on rival lines.

The procedure has been used at Medford, Ore., for 15 years.

United has used it successfully on a small scale for two winters. The airline thinks it should be extended to at least 12 other airports, including Washington, Detroit and Chicago.

It will not work every place. Los Angeles, for example, probably can expect no fog relief.

Northern airports will benefit because their fog occurs at colder temperatures.

What makes it work is the dry ice, which is frozen carbon dioxide. It is 110 degrees below zero Fahrenheit when solidified. United officials say it works best when the fog occurs at temperatures between 24 and 28 degrees. This is called super-cooled fog.

This is what they believe happens:

When dry ice pellets are released, they begin to turn to gas. This takes heat from the air. In this intense cooling, moisture begins to collect into ice particles and to descend. They pick up other particles and eventually turn into a light snow. No fog remains.

Last winter United tried it 74 times at 6 airports and it worked 60 times. Some 5,500 passengers got through, including 2,000 on rival lines.

The procedure has been used at Medford, Ore., for 15 years.

United has used it successfully on a small scale for two winters. The airline thinks it should be extended to at least 12 other airports, including Washington, Detroit and Chicago.

It will not work every place. Los Angeles, for example, probably can expect no fog relief.

Northern airports will benefit because their fog occurs at colder temperatures.

What makes it work is the dry ice, which is frozen carbon dioxide. It is 110 degrees below zero Fahrenheit when solidified. United officials say it works best when the fog occurs at temperatures between 24 and 28 degrees. This is called super-cooled fog.

This is what they believe happens:

When dry ice pellets are released, they begin to turn to gas. This takes heat from the air. In this intense cooling, moisture begins to collect into ice particles and to descend. They pick up other particles and eventually turn into a light snow. No fog remains.

Mississippi Beginning To Cause Determination In Mo.

LOUISIANA, Mo. AP -- Along the Mississippi between St. Louis and Hannibal, Mo., the river people stare the threat of a flood in the face from beneath furled eyebrows with grim determination.

It is nothing new. It's part of their lives.

They lived through high water last week that forced about 50 residents from their homes in Louisiana, Mo., and flooded Hannibal's Main Street.

Now, an even greater flood is expected to hit there when the Minnesota crests arrive downriver in about a week.

Already the river surrounds some of their farm silos. In Louisiana, an implement dealer has erected a sandbag wall around the front of his store. Sandbags also were used last week to turn the water away from downtown firms in Hannibal, where a board sidewalk was built on blocks to permit Easter shopping.

In Winfield to the south, Joe Kimberly got into his Jon boat with his small daughter, Gail, and rowed out to his pasture to pull debris from around his fences.

"If I don't do it now, when the water goes down the trash will just be sitting there," he said, pointing to the tops of fence posts jutting several inches above the surface. "Or the current pushing against the debris might knock the fences down."

Meanwhile, the favorite sport in the area is gigging and netting fish trapped when the river backed up over the lowlands and then fell suddenly.

And one of the principal topice of discussion is the threat of more levees breaking upriver.

Police Chief Notices Crime Done

COLUMBUS, Ga. AP -- Police Chief Clyde Adair was watching a local wrestling match on television and saw a possible crime committed.

The show featured Mario Galento who had won his match when a spectator climbed into the ring. The newcomer was Billy Boy Hines, also a wrestler.

The chief said Galento swung at Hines, hitting him in the face. With the blow, pennies scattered over the ring. Adair ordered on investigation.

Galento was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge for having a roll of pennies in his fist when he hit Hines. He was released on $77 bond pending a trial in Recorder's Court today.

Plentiful Foods Join Signs of Spring

Signs of spring in food stores during the next few weeks may well be in the form of a variety of items -- fresh, canned and dried -- all in bountiful supply.

According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Plentiful Foods List for April, consumers should find spring-like abundances of eggs; dried prunes and peas; broiler-fryers, honey; canned pears and pink salmon; and fresh cabbage, carrots and onions.

Outstanding among these plentiful items, reports USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, are eggs and prunes. Supplies of both are expected to be well above last year, with attractive consumer prices likely.

One of the best values in meaty foods is likely to be broiler-fryers. Even more of these tender birds are headed for market this April than a year ago.

Honey, for table use or cooking, is likely to be in the spotlight this month also. Last year's crop made available the largest supply of honey in more than 10 years.

Among canned goods, shoppers should find particularly large and dependable displays of both pears and pink salmon. Sizable "crops" of each were packed last year.

Dry peas--a natural supplement for the meatless meals still to be planned in Lent--are available in a supply that is larger than normal consumption.

Fresh vegetables from Texas and Florida--specifically cabbage, carrots and onions--also will be among the most plentiful foods during April.

15th Anniversary Of Silly Putty

NEW YORK AP -- Lest it be overlooked in the rush of world events, this Easter season is the 15th anniversary of the introduction of a chemical curiosity that has bounced its way around the globe.

It was discovered as a by-product of the government's effort to create synthetic rubber during World War II. And it was useless - useless, that is, until a flat - broke advertising and marketing specialist came across it.

The specialist, Peter Hodgson, 48, named it Silly Putty. He is no longer flat broke.

Hodgson made the pink substance into a multimillion-dollar adult toy which soon found its best market among children.

Silly Putty came into being in 1944. James Wright, an engineer working in General Electric's New Haven, Conn., laboratory, tossed a handful of boric acid into some silicone oil, a liquid refined from sand. The gooey result bounced when he tossed it on the floor, but failed as a substitute for rubber.

Nevertheless, it remained around for years, a conversation piece and plaything for Wright's friends and professional colleagues, mainly for its seemingly contradictory qualities.

It can be stretched or molded; balled up, it will bounce; struck suddenly with a hammer, it will shatter; flattened out, it will pick up pictures from a comic book; left alone, it will flow slower than molasses into a tired puddle.

Hodgson, born in Montreal, and raised in Norfolk, Va., had been a seaman, advertising copy writer, marketing consultant, wartime railroad troop traffic manager and magazine research director. But he was broke and jobless when he found his gold mine.

Working in a basement with a Yale student as a helper, Hodgson had to borrow $147.50 to pay for the first shipment of the substance. He put small amounts of silly putty into toy plastic eggs retailing for $1 and got them onto the national market.

Within six months, 30 Yale students were helping Hodgson crate the orders and he was counting a clear profit of $10,000.

Now 125 employes help him in a $6-million annual business. In addition to the New Haven plant, there is a subsidiary operation in Canada. He is negotiating to open others this year in Japan and West Germany and just received an inquiry about a possible plant in Mexico.

And the once flat broke advertising man relaxes on an 83-acre hilltop at Madison, Conn., with a swimming pool, tennis court and an old farm house 400 feet above the Long Island Sound boasting a view stretching almost from Orient Point to Oyster Bay.

"I can trace most everything I have to silly putty," said Hodgson, pleased.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I were deeply interested in your counsel that parents should NOT be expected to support children who marry in college. This is what happened in our family:

Our eldest son, (21), a junior at Yale, handsome, bright and promising, fell in love with a 19-year-old girl who attends a nearby school. They wanted to marry during spring vacation. We told our son we felt an obligation to educate him, but not to support him and a wife. We agreed to continue his usual allowance until he finished law school, but nothing more.

The parents of the girl decided our son was too good a catch to lose. They offered a lavish wedding, a beautiful bungalow, (completely furnished, of course) and agreed to pay all their living expenses -- indefinitely.

Our son now considers us "stingy, unco-operative, and downright mean." The girl's parents are "generous, loyal and understanding." We rarely see our son and his wife. The girl's parents see them a great deal. Was it worth it to stand by our principles? Sometimes I feel the price was too high. -- HEARTACHE IN NEW HAVEN

Dear Heartache: Unfortunately your son and his girl were for sale to the highest bidder and her parents put in the high bid.

This is a dismal picture, and not an uncommon one. I can only say I hope your son wakes up and recognizes the situation for what it is. The whole thing smells like last week's fish to me.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl who will be 16 years old next month. I have to share a bedroom with my 12-year-old brother who is retarded. I love my brother very much and I try to help him all I can but I do feel a girl my age should have some privacy.

When my girl friend invites me to stay overnight I am so envious that I an hardly stand it because she has a bedroom all to herself.

Dad admits we could afford to live in a larger place but he says it isn't necessary. Please say something to help me. -- BETTY BLUE

Dear Betty: A 16-year-old girl should not be sharing a bedroom with her younger brother. This is not good for either of you. I am adding my voice to yours in the hope that you will be moving to a larger place very soon. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is an executive. We frequently give cocktail parties, usually during convention time when the town is loaded with my husband's colleagues.

We love to entertain and people tell us we do it well. We plan our parties carefully. Although the atmosphere is casual and informal, a great deal of thought goes into the selection of the guests. Our home is not large and we have learned that too many guests can be deadly. Often we must leave off the names of folks we'd like to invite in order to insure a group of the right size.

Certain guests invariably bring four or six of their friends along. Somethings they phone ahead but usually they just show up at the door with the extras. The greeting generally goes like this: "Surpirse! Look Who I brought." Or -- "I knew you wouldn't mind." They feel, apparently, that just because it isn't a sit-down dinner it's all right.

Is there a solution to this problem? -- ONE-DOWNSMANSHIP

Dear One: When guests arrive at your door with uninvited extras you are trapped.

Anticipate the problem when you do the inviting. Say, "We can comfortably accommodate only a limited number of guests in our home, so please don't bring anyone with you."

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

News Media Not Complete, Govt. Tells What To Do

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — In World War II and in Korea, regulations for news coverage of armed conflict involving U.S. servicemen came from the military.

In Viet Nam, such information is under the supervision of the U.S. Information Service, a unit of the U.S. Information Agency, whose objective is to present the image of the United States in the most favorable light.

USIA is an independent agency under the policy direction of the White House and the State Department.

U.S. military briefing officers in Viet Nam are subordinate to Barry Zorthian, head of USIS in Viet Nam. He has criticized reporters in private for stories which did not violate security but which he thought were unfavorable to the United States.

Daily briefings on military operations are held in Saigon by Lt. Col. L. A. Breault, but they are held at USIS headquarters. Breault held a similar post in Korea, but his information came from Army intelligence and did not have to be cleared by USIS.

George Beebe, managing editor of the Miami (Fla.) Herald and president of The Associated Press Managing Editors Association, said in Miami Tuesday that USIA control of military briefings "should be of deep concern to the people of the United States."

Beebe in a statement said editors fear the American public is not getting "the full story nor the true story" of the war in Viet Nam.

A set of 20 ground rules for coverage of air strikes in Viet Nam was issued a week ago. Zorthian signed these as "minister-counselor of public affairs" although Col. Ben Lagare is the press information officer for the U.S. Military Assistance Command.

Zorthian's memorandum states that the rules "must be observed by official briefers and other American and Vietnamese official personnel."

It says information that will "normally be released as soon as available" includes the target hit, nationality of the striking force, whether the aircraft was land-based or naval, general characterization of the success of the mission, ordnance expended and tonnage, numbers of strike and support planes in round numbers, general description of enemy antiaircraft ground fire, and pilot sightings of unfriendly aircraft.

The memorandum prohibits disclosure of information on aircraft taking off on strikes, identification of land bases or location of bases from which aircraft were launched, number of aircraft damaged, or enemy air reaction other than that actually seen by strike personnel. The total aircraft lost will be released when recovery operations are completed.

Correspondents do not object to regulations issued for security reasons. But they object strongly to a policy of not allowing free access to military personnel unless an "escort officer" is present. The newsmen feel this inhibits military personnel during interviews.

Beef Roast To Be Bargain This Week

A wide variety of beef roasts may turn up with bargain prices this weekend at food markets in much of the nation.

And with the end of Lent and the Easter holidays there are more eggs available, which nearly always means lower prices. Egg prices may continue at bargain rates for another weekend or two.

And the end of the meatless meals during Lent has given a pickup to the demand for pork, so wholesale prices already high — were moving a bit higher.

One national supermarket chain has plenty of beef roast bargains for its New York City area outlets this weekend. A variety of boneless roasts is going for 85 cents a pound. Chuck roasts are at 59 and boneless chuck at 69. Sirloin steak is down 10 cents a pound at 89.

Eggs also dropped 2 to 4 cents a dozen, but there were no bargains in pork.

The West Coast was the only area reporting slightly higher wholesale prices for some beef cuts. Fresh pork items showed a downward trend there at the wholesale level.

Strawberries are moving into many sections of the nation this week from Louisiana, Texas and California.

Rhubarb, watermelons and cantaloup melons are also starting to market.

Among the better vegetable buys are cabbage, carrots, corn, onions, peppers and squash.

Dr. Binder Fights a Battle

By BOB COCHNAR
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) Latin-American politics, to the North American observer, is often a combustible mixture of coup and countercoup, revolution and confusion—not particularly important.

But add the specter of Naziism to this simmering political stew and you glimpse the 15-year ordeal of Theodor Binder, jungle doctor.

This soft-spoken man with piercing gray eyes, a disciple of Albert Schweitzer and a refugee from Nazi terrorism, arrived in 1948 to work with diseased and illiterate Indians and mestizos in Peru's interior. But he did not escape from Adolf Hitler.

"I was soon reintroduced to Naziism," Theodor Binder explained in his German-accented English during a visit to New York recently. "We were invited to the home of a rich German planter and on the wall of his main room was a big picture of Hitler.

"He asked if I had any German newspapers with me. I said 'no,' and explained why. I was immediately ordered out of his house."

Binder soon discovered that Peru's Nazi community was and is flourishing. "Hitler's pictures are all over. These sad people have regular meetings and spend much of their time trying to convince Peruvians that Hitler was right and that the concentration camps were Hollywood propaganda. They are dangerous."

* * *

In the beginning, neither Dr. Binder nor his wife Carmen paid serious attention to the Nazis. The Binders had come to Peru to start a hospital. And in 1955, a group of well-equipped buildings rose from the tangled rain forests and fetid swamps of the country's interior.

Money poured in for its support—from Germany, Switzerland, Sweden. A U. S. foundation was established for the Hospital Amazonico Albert Schweitzer. Boston's Cardinal Cushing contributed $10,000.

In Peru, the government and several wealthy families also give Binder aid—among them, Maria Louisa Gildemeister, head of the powerful and respected family which is Peru's largest sugar exporter.

With that contribution, Theodor Binder and his hospital apparently became political tools.

"Miss Gildemeister was the head of our Lima foundation," Dr. Binder said. "But when the government thought about passing land reform bills about two years ago which would have deprived her of some of her holdings, she decided to fight. I think she planned to use our hospital as a political battleground. Perhaps she felt that discrediting me would help her."

Reports were circulated to everyone who had a connection with the hospital—even in Europe—that "I was a Communist, that I was a Nazi war criminal, that I wasn't a doctor, that I wasn't Theodor Binder."

* * *

Peru's Gildemeister family has been a potent political and economic force for more than a century. Its New York bank says "it is very well regarded by Peru's banking and commercial people." With such backing, the rumors about Dr. Binder were not taken lightly. Der Spiegel, Germany's influential news magazine, wrote a critical account of the hospital. The German press circulated stories that Binder was misusing contributions to the hospital, that he didn't take proper care of patients, that he committed sexual offenses against nurses and patients.

Said Binder: "It was filthy. And none of it—not a shred of it—was true. They succeeded in uniting Peru's Communists and the Nazis against me."

Official Peru then cast a stormy look in the direction of the beleaguered hospital. The minister of public health, whom Binder says is a close friend of the Gildemeister family, ordered an investigation.

"We welcomed the investigation," the doctor recounts, "until we found that three of the four men to be sent were our worst enemies. So we refused to allow them to enter the hospital."

The Peruvian press was then invited by Binder to visit the hospital. "And all the papers and magazines, with the exception of one controlled by the Gildemeisters, exploded the rumors and printed the truth."

* * *

Since the propaganda stopped the flow of funds from Germany, the doctor last February invited two members of the board of the U. S. foundation to inspect the hospital. Their verdict, as several German newspapers reported, was that "all of the allegations are false."

Yet the rumors persist and funds are still frozen in Germany. "Miss Gildemeister has much money," Dr. Binder says, "and she has told me she will not rest until I leave Peru. But I will never leave."

The Nazis haven't stopped fighting, either. Binder maintains that former SS generals walk freely through Lima streets. "They and their foul friends are fiercely anti-Semitic. They poison the atmosphere. And they have had their bad effect on Peruvians."

But the jungle doctor, his wife and staff refuse to allow their enemies to stop the work of the hospital. They treat some 400 outpatients a week and about 40 bed patients. A grant from an American foundation sponsors research in fungus diseases.

U. S. Peace Corpsmen have worked at the Hospital Amazonico Albert Schweitzer. Theodor Binder still hopes to establish clinics elsewhere in Peru.

THE WORK GOES ON: Theodor and Carmen Binder treat the sick and fight political enemies at the same time.

SPOKANE, Wash., AP--Capt. Ernest C. Pintler of the Spokane County sheriff's department was embarrassed by having to report the theft of his own car.

Capt. Pintler said he had left the keys in the car, taken from his driveway early Tuesday.

Police arrested Norreen D. Schenk, 26, and charged her with the theft. She told officers she had been at a party in Pintler's neighborhood and couldn't find a ride home.

Tuna Sales Up In America

LOS ANGELES AP--The American tuna industry is solving most of the problems that have plagued it in recent years.

Since World War II, it has had to face the competition of an ever-burgeoning Japanese industry.

For the last decade three Latin-American countries--Peru, Ecuador and Chile--have tried to restrict it, by extending their territorial limits 200 miles out to sea--over the world's richest tuna fishing grounds.

And two years ago, the deaths of two Detroit women after eating a can of tainted tuna sent a fright through the canning industry.

The industry has reinstated the tuna with a $10-million promotion program. Diplomacy overcame the 200-mile gambit. And this year, due to a curious mixture of economic factors, Japan is losing its grip in the American tuna market.

A steadying element in every crisis has been the well-developed American taste for tuna. Last year consumer demand approached an unprecedented one billion cans and sales so far this year indicate it may go even higher.

The Japanese have always been at a disadvantage in the American supermarket because a 45 per cent tariff on vegetable oil forces him to pack his product in brine.

Most Americans don't like saltwater tuna, so the Japanese turned to Western Europe where the oil tariff doesn't exist.

Suddenly tuna is a popular dish in Italy. Ten years ago Italians didn't import 10,000 tons. This year they will purchase over 50,000. Even in Japan, the consumer has evolved a taste for the fish in something other than its raw, dry state--as a smoked, highly spiced sausage--not yet available in America.

So where the Japanese accounted for 28 per cent of the tuna being processed in American canneries in the first quarter of 1964, in the same period this year, they will account for only 19 per cent.

The individual U. S. fisherman, however, feels he has been short changed.

He works aboard one of 143 vessels, most of them California based. In the winter his catch will be dropped along the West Coast at San Pedro or San Diego, Calif., or Astoria, Ore. In the summer months he may feed canneries in Maryland, Massachusetts or Maine.

But as long as foreign competition exists, he is forced to price the catch at world levels. In the early 1950s a ton of premium tuna drew $340; today it sells for $270.

"That's too low," says one San Pedro fisherman. "Meanwhile my cost of living has risen and I'm working just as hard."

WASHINGTON AP -- Kermit Gordon, director of the Bureau of the Budget since December 1962, is resigning about June 1 to become vice president of the Brookings Institution, a private research center.

He will be succeeded by Charles L. Schultze, who quit less than 10 weeks ago as assistant budget director and was told by President Johnson: "I hope that I may call on you for help in the future because we have much unfinished business to see to."

The shift was announced Tuesday by the White House.

Schultze, 40, left the government Feb. 12 to resume his teaching career as a professor of economics at the University of Maryland.

The stratosphere begins at an altitude of six miles in regions near the poles, nine or more miles near the equator.

THE SCOTT COUNTY Courthouse, Benton, decoration to the downstair hallway, all inside steps, and rest rooms, as well as painting is near completion. The floor was covered with a two-inch hard surface, on which was placed a half-inch two-tone terrazzo flooring over the almost 200-foot hallway, steps and landing. Two new rest rooms on the first floor have been finished. A marble baseboard of imported grey Italian surrounds the flooring and landing. The project when completed will cost around $12,000 from funds set aside for this purpose. The county court expects further improvements of the building next year and following years in a planned program, without raising any taxes.

Appropriations Committee Turns Toward State Colleges

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Senate Appropriations Committee today turned its attention to state colleges.

Appearing first at the hearing was Dr. Ben L. Morton, executive secretary of the State Commission on Higher Education.

In a general statement applying to all of the five regional colleges, Morton stressed the need to bring the teacher-student ratio to one instructor for 20 students.

It is now much higher in most schools, he said.

The most pressing need of colleges and universities is an adequate number of teachers, he said. If necessary, other needs can wait, but he emphasized teacher salaries must be raised if schools are to meet mushrooming enrollment.

The commission recommended appropriation of $18.8 million in state funds to operate the five schools. An additional $1.9 million would come from college funds.

Morton said the commission recommended an increase from $100 to $200 tuition for out-of-state students attending Missouri colleges to help meet salary demands.

Projected enrollment for the coming school year at the five state colleges is 24,899--more than 3,000 above current attendance.

The first of the colleges to be heard by the committee was Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg.

Dr. Warren C. Lovinger, president, said his school expects 7,410 students to enroll this fall.

Lovinger requested more than $8 million to operate the school next year. But Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended only $5 million.

The House approved a figure only slightly higher than the governor's.

Lovinger also urged the committee to approve requests for two new classroom buildings on the Warrensburg campus.

The House authorized $2 million for a new science classroom building and $1.6 million for an education classroom facility. Additional federal funds probably would be available for these projects.

Chairman J.F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, remarked the committee might find it hard to justify many of the building projects requested.

Operating under a tight, one-year budget, he said, the Senate might be reluctant to tie up funds for facilities on which construction might not begin for two years.

John Lester Earns A Promotion

John E. Lester, son of Mrs. D. H. Page, resident of Sikeston, has been promoted to a manager of the Dial Finance Company in Modesto, Calif.

Mr. Lester became affiliated with Dial Finance in January of 1962 in San Diego and while there, he earned a promotion to collection manager before being transferred to San Bernardino. In January, 1963, he was transferred to Hayward as assistant manager.

He is a graduate of Missouri University.

Appropriations Committee Turns Toward State Colleges

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Senate Appropriations Committee today turned its attention to state colleges.

Appearing first at the hearing was Dr. Ben L. Morton, executive secretary of the State Commission on Higher Education.

In a general statement applying to all of the five regional colleges, Morton stressed the need to bring the teacher-student ratio to one instructor for 20 students.

It is now much higher in most schools, he said.

The most pressing need of colleges and universities is an adequate number of teachers, he said. If necessary, other needs can wait, but he emphasized teacher salaries must be raised if schools are to meet mushrooming enrollment.

The commission recommended appropriation of $18.8 million in state funds to operate the five schools. An additional $1.9 million would come from college funds.

Morton said the commission recommended an increase from $100 to $200 tuition for out-of-state students attending Missouri colleges to help meet salary demands.

Projected enrollment for the coming school year at the five state colleges is 24,899--more than 3,000 above current attendance.

The first of the colleges to be heard by the committee was Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg.

Dr. Warren C. Lovinger, president, said his school expects 7,410 students to enroll this fall.

Lovinger requested more than $8 million to operate the school next year. But Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended only $5 million.

The House approved a figure only slightly higher than the governor's.

Lovinger also urged the committee to approve requests for two new classroom buildings on the Warrensburg campus.

The House authorized $2 million for a new science classroom building and $1.6 million for an education classroom facility. Additional federal funds probably would be available for these projects.

Chairman J.F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, remarked the committee might find it hard to justify many of the building projects requested.

Operating under a tight, one-year budget, he said, the Senate might be reluctant to tie up funds for facilities on which construction might not begin for two years.

John Lester Earns A Promotion

John E. Lester, son of Mrs. D. H. Page, resident of Sikeston, has been promoted to a manager of the Dial Finance Company in Modesto, Calif.

Mr. Lester became affiliated with Dial Finance in January of 1962 in San Diego and while there, he earned a promotion to collection manager before being transferred to San Bernardino. In January, 1963, he was transferred to Hayward as assistant manager.

He is a graduate of Missouri University.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

You have been raised with Christ. (Colossians 3:1, RSV)

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 49
Reading time 5 Min.
Study time 5 Min.

You know how to say 'Puedo ir' (I can go). Now we will show you how to use the verb 'Poder' (To be able, can) in the past tense:

Present Tense

A) I can go B) Puedo ir. C) poo-AID-o/ear

A) He can go. B) El puede ir. C) l/poo-AID-day/ear

A) We can go B) Podemos ir. C) poe-DAY-mos/ear

A) They can go. B) Ellos pueden ir. C) A-yos/poo-AID-en/ear

Past Tense

A) I was able to go. B) Pude ir C)POO-day-ear

A) He was able to go. B) El pudo ir. C) l/POO-doe/ear

A) We were able to go. B) Pudimos ir C) poo-DEE-mos/ear

A) They were able to go. B) Ellos pudieron ir. C) A-yos/poo-dee-AIR-ron/ear.

It would be wise to use the definite past "keys" in the same manner that you learned the present tense "keys":

'Quiero', 'I want'
'Quise', 'I wanted'
Puedo, ' 'I can'
'Pude', 'I was able to, I could'

Never learn to conjugate your verb "keys" vertically. Always learn horizontally.

Conquer the first person singular before you go to the other persons.

CAUTION: If you do not follow this advice, you will become a 'mechanic' in the language; which means that you will search your mind for the tense and the person you want to use. Remember, 70% of all languages are spoken in the present tense; and that over half of that percentage is spoken in the first person singular. So--conquer the first person singular of the present tense before going on to other persons or tenses!

PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

You have been raised with Christ. (Colossians 3:1, RSV)

PRAYER: O mighty and eternal God, we offer the gratitude of our hearts to Thee because through Jesus Thou hast opened the door of eternal life for us. We thank Thee for Thy Son, who is our Savior. In His name we praise Thee. Amen.

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 49
Reading time 5 Min.
Study time 5 Min.

You know how to say 'Puedo ir' (I can go). Now we will show you how to use the verb 'Poder' (To be able, can) in the past tense:

Present Tense

A) I can go B) Puedo ir. C) poo-AID-o/ear

A) He can go. B) El puede ir. C) l/poo-AID-day/ear

A) We can go B) Podemos ir. C) poe-DAY-mos/ear

A) They can go. B) Ellos pueden ir. C) A-yos/poo-AID-en/ear

Past Tense

A) I was able to go. B) Pude ir C)POO-day-ear

A) He was able to go. B) El pudo ir. C) l/POO-doe/ear

A) We were able to go. B) Pudimos ir C) poo-DEE-mos/ear

A) They were able to go. B) Ellos pudieron ir. C) A-yos/poo-dee-AIR-ron/ear.

It would be wise to use the definite past "keys" in the same manner that you learned the present tense "keys":

'Quiero', 'I want'
'Quise', 'I wanted'
Puedo,' 'I can'
'Pude', 'I was able to, I could'

Never learn to conjugate your verb "keys" vertically. Always learn horizontally.

Conquer the first person singular before you go to the other persons.

CAUTION: If you do not follow this advice, you will become a 'mechanic' in the language; which means that you will search your mind for the tense and the person you want to use. Remember, 70% of all languages are spoken in the present tense; and that over half of that percentage is spoken in the first person singular. So--conquer the first person singular of the present tense before going on to other persons or tenses!
